Friends in £13,000 donation in Becky's memory

By James Benjamin
yourshepway@kosmedia.co.uk

FRIENDS and family of a 24-year-old woman tragically killed in a car crash at Easter have donated thousands of pounds to charity in her memory.

Pet lover and keen runner Rebekah Alderson from Littlestone died in a three-car smash on the A2070 between Hamstreet and Ashford on April 6.

A popular figure, who worked as a personal advisor at Connexions in Dover, friends organised a ten-mile sponsored fun run around Folkestone last month, with hundreds of people taking part.

It was decided the money would go to one of her favourite charities, the Dogs Trust in Canterbury.

And in an emotional handover on Saturday, they presented the charity with a cheque for just under £13,000.

A spokesman for the Dogs Trust said: "People came out in their droves to be involved in the run and raised a fantastic amount of money."

"The Dogs Trust has been chosen by close friends and family as Becky was a huge dog lover. The generous donation will go a long way to improve the rehoming centre's facilities and help the centre care for more than 600 stray and abandoned dogs each year."

Her parents described Ms Alderson as "perfection in every way".

Project digs for success in national archaeological awards

AN ARCHAEOLOGY project has been shortlisted for a leading national award.

A Town Unearthed: Folkestone Before 1500 is one of just three projects to be in the running for the Best Community Archaeology category of the British Archaeology Awards 2012, along with projects in Oxford and London.

The awards are a showcase for the best in UK archaeology and a central event in the archaeological calendar.

Dr Lesley Hardy of Canterbury Christ Church College, director of A Town Unearthed, said: "We are tremendously pleased to have been shortlisted for this award; congratulations should go to all those involved – partners, funders, and the hundreds of volunteers who have played a part in many different ways."

The three-year project is a partnership between Canterbury Archaeological Trust, Canterbury Christ Church University and the Folkestone People's History Centre and is funded by the Heritage Lottery Fund and the Roger De Haan Charitable Trust, with additional contributions by Folkestone Town Council, Kent Archaeological Society, Kent County Council and Shepway District Council. Central to A Town Unearthed has been two summer seasons of digging at the site of the Roman villa on East Cliff.

The winner of the award will be announced and the award presented at a ceremony at the British Museum on July 9.

The awards, established in 1976, cover every aspect of UK archaeology.

STANDARD OF LIVING

County's towns hit highs and lows on list of best places to live in the UK

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

TONBRIDGE is one of the best places to live in the country, according to a new report.

It was also found to be the number one area to set up home for people with older children.

West Kent towns dominated the results, with Sevenoaks and Tunbridge Wells in the top 10 for people who have younger children.

Maidstone performed well too, placed 52 on the list for homes with younger children, and ranked 74th best place to live overall.

However Thanet didn't score so highly, coming in 293rd out of 324 local authorities in the overall list, making it one of the worst places in the UK. It also ranked in the bottom 10 areas to live for families both young or older children.

Swale also scored poorly at 214, with Medway at 236th as a place to live for people whose children have left home.

The analysis, conducted by credit checking company Experian, looked at different variables such as crime rates and unemployment levels in each local authority. They then ranked the areas to find the best place to live.

Experian also created top 10 lists for four distinct life stages: people before they have children; people with young children; people with older children; and people who are post-children.

The report, commissioned by the Sunday Times, added extra variables for these life stages, such as lots of shops and job opportunities for people before they have children.

Tonbridge and Malling is the sixth best place to live in the country down to the area scoring highly in each variable.

Education standards there are high, ranking 32 out of 324 local authorities for highest Ofsted score and 18 out of 324 for educational achievement.

TOP SPOT: Tonbridge ranked highly in the survey

Male life expectancy for the area is considered good at 79.5 years and there are strong levels of employment with 88 per cent of economically active adults working.

Homebuyers will be pleased to know house affordability is good compared to income; the average house costs 7.75 times the average income, which stood at £30,738 per household.

Shops in the area are also doing well – the retail vacancy rate is only seven per cent.

Tonbridge and Malling Borough Council chief executive, David Hughes, said: "The very high ranking of Tonbridge and Malling in the survey comes as welcome recognition that the area boasts excellent educational and leisure facilities, has a skilled workforce reflected in low unemployment, and is a low crime area with strong and thriving communities.

"It is an excellent place to live and work and the survey results can only enhance the reputation of the area and boost the chances of further inward investment."

Sevenoaks came fifth in the top 10 list of best areas to live for families with young children, and Tunbridge Wells came eighth.

Sevenoaks District Council leader Cllr Peter Fleming, said: "It is fantastic that Sevenoaks district has been recognised as providing a positive environment for residents with young children.

"A safe community combined with a vibrant economy and an abundance of green open spaces creates a welcoming district able to offer a wonderful place for people of all ages to live and work."

The results show Sevenoaks and Tunbridge Wells have good schools, a well qualified population, house affordability and lots of job opportunities.

Councillor Jane March, cabinet member with responsibility for economic development at Tunbridge Wells Borough Council said: "It's very pleasing to see that Tunbridge Wells is so well placed in this list as being a great place for people with young families.

"The borough has lots to offer for both residents and businesses who locate here."

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Hunt for dog attacker

THE RSPCA is hunting an animal abuser who hit a dog on the head so violently it had to be put down. The Jack Russell terrier was found cowering after being hit with what is thought to be a stiletto shoe, screwdriver, or a piece of wood with a nail in. It was left with a hole in its skull. The attack took place in Dover over the jubilee weekend. Dog walkers found the Jack Russell on the footpath at the junction of Bunkers Hill Road and Hillside Road.

➔ EastEnder's school gig

EASTENDERS star Lindsey Coulson, who plays matriarch Carol Jackson, will be supporting The New School at West Heath, Sevenoaks, at its annual fundraiser Lawnfest. She will be storytelling in the children's area at the one-day boutique festival on Saturday June 30. Other stars performing include The Magic Numbers, Cleo Sol, Man like Me, and Manchow. Tickets are adult £20; family £40; over 9s £10. More information at www.lawnfest.co.uk.

➔ Road rage attack on boy

POLICE are hunting a van driver who drove onto the kerb and ran over the foot of a schoolboy before getting out, attacking him, and throwing him into a hedge. The incident took place as the boy, 13, was crossing Ashford Road, Tenterden, with a friend, near Homewood School. It took place around 4.30pm on May 28, but police have only now revealed the incident. Some vehicles had been held up as the boys crossed.

ENVIRONMENT

Water firms say hosepipe ban will stay in place despite heavy rainfall

WHILE one Kent water company is tentatively looking at possibly lifting its hosepipe ban, the others say the restrictions will stay in force despite the recent weeks of heavy rain.

Vital underground supplies have not risen enough with the rainfall, although some reservoir levels have improved.

One of the largest reservoirs, run by Southern Water, is Bewl near Lamberhurst. Levels have crept up to a healthier 78 per cent, but the company said overground supplies only account for seven per cent of its stock.

Thames Water covers just a small section of the county, and revealed it is considering lifting the restriction. But Kent's major suppliers, Southern, South East Water and Veolia all say the hosepipe ban, which began on April 5, stays in place.

After two dry winters, rainfall has varied enormously recently with 100mm in December, down to under 20mm in February, and now back up again to 80mm in April.

But it's the wrong type of rain. Southern said it needs a persistent, averagely heavy rain so it can soak through the dry ground and in to the aquifers, which supply around three quarters of the water needed in Kent.

Too little, and it evaporates or is used by flora. Too much and it causes floods.

South East Water said the ban will stay in place until at least the autumn.

Managing director Paul Butler said: "We understand customers could be confused and frustrated as to why some companies are considering lifting restrictions while we have to keep ours in place.

"The fact is the amount of water currently available in our underground reserves simply doesn't support that course of action, and ahead of what could be much warmer, drier months."

Veolia is urging customers to make summer water saving a top priority, and its head of operations in the South East, Gavin McHale, said: "Unfortunately, any rain over the summer will not help us because now most of the water will be taken up by trees and plants or evaporate."

Dame Yve Buckland, chair of the Consumer Council for Water, said: "It is important any restrictions are lifted at the right time so there is not a risk in the short to medium term of them being reintroduced, as this could be confusing."

And the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs added: "We asked the Environment Agency to keep the drought under constant review so that no area has restrictions placed upon them if they are not necessary.

"People should continue to use water wisely – we must start to recognise it as the precious resource it is."

REGENERATION

Parties clash over claim Portas cash a 'sticking plaster' for town's plight

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

PLANS for a town's high street to get a Mary Portas makeover have been described as a "sticking plaster" that will not tackle deep-seated economic problems.

The 'Portas Pilot' money is to help rejuvenate high streets, but the local Labour Party says not enough cash is on offer.

Dartford's application to become one of the 12 Portas pilot towns in the UK was successful along with Margate, which is notorious as one of Britain's most financially starved areas.

Labour members in Dartford said although the investment is worthwhile, it is simply a drop in the ocean of what is actually required.

They said little has been done to reverse the town centre's decline since the Tory council was elected in 2003.

Just £79,000 of Portas-related funding is available to support a range of council measures which by themselves are far too modest and low-level to tackle Dartford's problems, the group said. And it claims government-led support for Dartford has come to a grinding halt.

It said the Portas money is being spent on "low level" projects like buying a handful of pop-up market stalls, training for local shopkeepers and "some kind of drop-in advice centre" for a town centre where 20 per cent of the shops are empty.

Labour group leader Cllr Geoff Prout said: "The Portas money is just a sticking plaster and the council's proposals are just too modest to make much difference to a town where one on five shops are empty.

"It's far too little and much too late – Dartford needs a coherent long-term regeneration plan to attract businesses back into the town and to generate new jobs for local people.

"Under the Tories, the town centre has been in decline for years while a new Tesco was presented as being the great hope. But that's still years away and, instead of a coherent regeneration plan, all we've got are some small-scale gestures from the Tory council and some spare change from the Tory-led government.

"All town centres, Dartford included, would benefit from policies that support economic growth, but this Tory-led government's determination to push through swinging spending cuts, regardless of the consequences, is a recipe for recession."

Dartford council leader Cllr Councillor Jeremy Kite hit back saying: "The Labour strategy seems to be to rubbish everything.

AN IDEAS WOMAN: Shopping guru Mary Portas

"On the Portas money, no-one has ever claimed this is a catch-all solution. I am not sure if Labour is saying we shouldn't have bid for it or we shouldn't have won.

"We just want to do a little bit of good in our town. My strategy is to only focus on the positive. All this negativity is so old-fashioned.

"We have never claimed this will cure all our problems, we are suffering hard, but are determined to do something about it.

"Mary Portas knows a thing or two about retail and obviously saw something in our bid that she liked. Perhaps Labour should be telling her she's no bloody good."

Margate is getting £100,000 for projects like turning shops in to enterprise centres, courses, plus a market.

Towns like Sheerness, Ramsgate and Ashford plan to tweak their failed bids and try again.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ M-way works warning

MOTORISTS who use the M20 should brace themselves for delays next week when overnight safety work begins on a stretch of the motorway. The Highways Agency says the work will see road markings and studs renewed on both carriageways between junction eight and nine – between Maidstone and Ashford. Work starts on Monday, June 11, and is expected to be finished by July 6. There will be overnight lane closures and a temporary 50mph speed limit.

➔ Young animal sleuths

YOUNG visitors to Port Lympne Wild Animal Park near Ashford can become detectives this month as they uncover clues to find out where the animals have gone, while discovering all about the wild animal park's schemes to send captive born animals back to the wild. Visitors will be able to follow the detective trail and fill in the answers in their free Ranger Log Books available from the gatehouse. More details at www.aspinallfoundation.org/portlympne.

➔ Games show kicks off

DEMAND for the Olympic celebration at Leeds Castle has smashed all expectations, with thousands keen to see hip hop stars Rizzle Kicks. There have been nearly three times as many applicants as there are tickets available. The online ballot for the 4,670 free tickets closed on Friday. Maidstone council, which is organising the July 19 event to welcome the Olympic Torch said 80 per cent of the tickets will go to locals.

WILDLIFE

Shelling begins in fight to win back isle's coast from a foreign invader

AN ARMY of volunteers are taking to the beaches to start the fightback against foreign invaders who have quietly been setting up camp on the coast.

The year-long project will assess exactly how widespread the invading Pacific oyster is around the Thanet coastline.

The trained volunteers are working near the Western Undercliff at Ramsgate to gather vital data on the species, which should not be able to survive in British waters.

With claims the seas have warmed slightly, it's thought these Pacific oysters could have escaped from licensed farms, and are now believed to be taking over vast parts of Kent's protected chalk reef.

So now a scheme by Natural England is setting out to discover how bad the situation is.

The major Southern Water sewage spill this week, which affected all Thanet's beaches, will not halt the start of the project.

Volunteers will be armed with dry stone walling hammers and a hand-held lawn edging tool to remove the Pacific oyster's top shells.

The bottom shell is left in place to avoid damage to the reef, and the oyster itself will be left as food for birds.

The team will also have a tally counter to keep count of just how many there are.

It will all be done at low tide when the oysters are uncovered to make the work safer, and will be repeated 10 times over the next year.

Experts believe the Pacific oysters are driving out the native blue mussels and disturbing the reef. Their possible impact on other species will be assessed during the survey work.

Willie McKnight, project co-ordinator working for Natural England, said: "We are targeting selected sections along the coast which were identified by the monitoring data to remove the oysters. We have a group of specially trained local volunteers who will remove the oysters safely.

"It is important this isn't attempted by those who are not trained as some of the Pacific oysters attach themselves to Kent's protected chalk reef and therefore removal has to be done with great care.

"We are so grateful to have such willing volunteers – it is a great step in the long-term management of a non-native species."

The Pacific oyster population was first discovered during a survey of the north east Kent European Marine Sites by Kent Wildlife Trust in 2007, in much higher numbers than expected.

The situation has been monitored ever since because the area is of national and international importance, with a range of special legal designations protecting these native species and habitats.

HOLOCAUST

Students describe horrors confronting England footballers on visit to Auschwitz

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

ENGLAND'S football players had to be "emotionally prepared" ahead of their visit to the Auschwitz, according to teachers and pupils.

The tour of the notorious World War Two concentration camp on Friday was part of the team's build-up to the Euro 2012 championships, being held in Poland and Ukraine.

Students and teachers from St Edmund's School, Canterbury, recently went to the camp and saw the horrors that confronted the Three Lions stars.

The team arrived on Wednesday at their training camp near Krakow, Poland. As part of an educational trip some went to the death camp, while others visited Oskar Schindler's metalwork factory where 1,000 Jews were saved from the gas chambers so they could work.

The England players were

HELL ON EARTH: Several pupils from St Edmund's School in Canterbury were in tears during their visit to the WWII concentration camp due to sign the museum's guest book before lighting a candle of remembrance on the train tracks at Birkenau.

Auschwitz, whose front gate sign, 'Arbeit macht frei', means 'work sets you free', is actually several camps, and includes 45 smaller satellite facilities.

It is estimated 1.3 million Jews and others were put to death there or died from disease or starvation, as part of the Nazi party's 'final solution'. The camp was liberated by Soviet troops on January 27, 1945, now known as International Holocaust Remembrance Day.

Mark Sell, director of drama at St Edmund's, wrote a play called Remember, to educate children about the Holocaust.

It was performed at the school two years ago, and has also been staged at the camp.

Among the students on the trip was Hugh Murrell, who played a role similar to the famous Warsaw ghetto boy.

The 17-year-old, studying theatre and film, described what the players would have experienced: "It is a shock when you first step inside. You find yourself thinking about all those people who once stood on the same ground and what was about to happen."

"It is hardly a day out, and can be daunting, but it is something everyone should do so this never happens again."

"I remember my grandparents speaking about it and knowing Jews who had been taken away. It's terrible."

And Mr Sell said the players needed to be emotionally prepared. He said: "You can't fail to be moved when you go in and see the rooms, and the mountain of human hair. My students get emotional on these trips. There are quite a few tears and they hug each other."

Former Sex Pistol reveals his public image been warmly welcomed by critics and fans alike.

With new album This Is PiL, it would seem he is just as able to put a cat amongst the proverbial post-punk pigeons today as he was when he set PiL up just months after the Sex Pistols split.

One thing, however, has dogged him throughout the five decades his career has now spanned and will no doubt haunt him again in Medway next month: stage fright.

"I still get very nervous going on stage," he explains. "If I lost that I'd lose the driving energy needed to do what I do."

"You have to be so committed to what it is you get up to and it seems to me the only thing to get the adrenaline going is pure fear."

"It's the fear of letting people down – it's always been like that. I've read many a book about stage fright, from the likes of Laurence Olivier onwards; I was relieved I wasn't the only one. I know that with stage fright I'm among good company."

"And many singers suffer from that. They may tell the press something different, but it's fear. It's a hard thing. You don't have an instrument in front of you, you don't have a machine that goes 'bing', you can't hit anything, you can't twang some strings, it all has to come from inside and the nervous energy and the adrenaline is what makes that happen and react to the surroundings. And hopefully it works favourably."

"I'm at my happiest when I'm on stage."

Organisers of the ME1 festival in Rochester are banking on PiL providing a springboard to bigger and better things over the coming years.

PiL top a line-up with Leeds band and indie favourites the Wedding Present supporting alongside local group Theatre Royal and hip-hop outfit Kids Unique.

It will provide the highlight of a series of live music events taking place in venues throughout Rochester on the day.

If all goes to plan, then next year should see the event spread over two days, and then three by 2014.

It is another festival in an already crowded marketplace.

"It's nothing like when I was young," he reflects. "It used to be one stage, 12-15 bands a day and no-one cared about the format and running order. Now it's so orchestrated."

"If the audience is like me, they come to see everything. I used to love it when I was 15, I'd bunk on a train and go up north to any festival I could. I'd just spend the weekend crawling in and out of the fences."

"Money is tight when you're young, but the thrill of seeing so many bands approaching the world of music so differently was pretty inspiring."

"It was through that diversity that I found my own voice."

Visit www.kentnews.co.uk for an extended interview with John Lydon.

Public Image Ltd perform at ME1 in Rochester Castle Gardens on Saturday, July 28. Support comes from the Wedding Present, Theatre Royal and Kids Unique. Tickets cost £26 and are on sale now. See www.musiceventone.co.uk for more information.

FAMED artist Tracey Emin helped persuade one of Britain's best dramatists to write a series of love stories set in the town where they both grew up – Margate.

Bafta winner Dominic Savage is both writer and director of the True Love series of dramas which run on BBC One between June 18-22.

Savage said: "It's been burning inside me for a long time and I thought that if I didn't do it now, I probably never would."

"A series of love stories in a place that I consider to be romantic. It felt absolutely right."

And the series boasts a star-studded cast, including David Tennant, David Morrissey, Jane Horrocks, Ashley Walters and Billie Piper.

Margate may have been an obvious location for Savage, but it was the enthusiasm from Emin that sealed the deal after they met at the opening of Turner Contemporary.

He said: "She was incredibly emotional about the place, as was I, and she said, 'You've got to make a film here, Dominic, you've just got to.' I thought, 'Yes, this is it!' It was clear I had to do it."

Refusing to make life simple, Savage said he decided to film without a proper script – just 10 pages of notes for the 30-minute episodes.

He said he uses the method because he believes it makes the acting real, so creating a drama that makes a better connection with an audience.

He said it doesn't work every time, but he can then "do it again and again".

Savage said: "I always wanted each of the films to encapsulate love in a completely truthful and visceral way. With love stories, the films that really work are the ones where you completely believe it – but so few do that."

Red Arrows swoop in to mark airshow's return

By Nick Ames
nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A SPECTACULAR display from an RAF Typhoon Eurofighter was the climax to the Folkestone Air Show.

Staged last Saturday as part of celebrations to mark the Queen's Diamond Jubilee, the event also included the first public aerobatic display by the Red Arrows as a team of seven.

The RAF's top display team is flying seven-strong this year following the deaths of two pilots in 2011 and the departure of its first female pilot.

The formation made their entrance flying low over the town and out to sea, with red, white and blue smoke streaming from behind.

The drizzle and low cloud had given way to intermittent blue skies, and the Red Arrows got the best of the weather.

The airshow was the first to be held on Folkestone seafront for nine years and thousands flocked to The Leas and the coastal park which borders the shore to obtain vantage points.

Other highlights of the display included the Battle of Britain Flight which featured legendary combat aircraft from World War Two.

A formation of three took to the skies and to great applause a Lancaster bomber flanked by a Hurricane and a Spitfire flew at low level over the sea – almost at eye level with spectators watching from rooftops and balconies of homes along the cliff-top promenade.

Aerobatic displays by an RAF Hawk, flights of biplanes and stunt aircraft also took place during the four-hour event which saw the aircraft taking part flying to and from Manston and Lydd airports.

ASTRONOMY

Weather thwarts Venus stargazers

NEARLY 100 people who turned out on Wednesday morning to catch a glimpse of the transit of Venus, were thwarted by the British weather.

The transit is where the planet can be clearly seen passing between the Earth and the Sun, in a sort of miniature eclipse.

The group of stargazers gathered on the beach at the Isle of Grain hoping to witness the celestial event which happens just twice a century – next the sighting will not be for 105 years.

The Mid-Kent Astronomical Society said it would have been a spectacular sight, had the clouds partly a little earlier.

It said more than 80 people from across the South East of England and London, arrived with them to watch.

Organiser Bob Tollervey said: "Many astronomers were on hand to explain all about the transit and later to explain the sunspots and even craters that were clearly visible on the Moon. Unfortunately the British weather did not play ball but everyone went away happy."

Drink-drive sports fans face a red card ban, warn police

By James Benjamin

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

SPORTS fans are being told they face the high jump if they are caught driving under the influence of drink or drugs this summer.

Police issued a stern warning that they will look to fast-track those caught posing a danger on our roads, with justice bowled up so fast drivers could lose their licence within a day of being caught.

The warning came as the Euro 2012 football tournament kicked off on Friday, to be followed by a summer of sporting events which will include the Olympics, cricket, and Wimbledon.

England play their first game of the tournament on Monday night, against France.

Virtual court technology will again be used to put those charged with driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs before magistrates immediately.

The no-nonsense attitude forms part of the Don't Blow It campaign being rolled out across the county.

In conjunction with Kent County Council and Medway Council, Kent Police will be particularly vigilant this summer, looking out for drivers who are impaired by alcohol or drugs. They will remind drivers that if they give a positive breath test or fail to provide a specimen they will be arrested.

Sgt Hannah Brown, said: "Kent Police takes a zero tolerance approach to drink and drug driving and the summer is one of the busiest times of year for us. This is because people socialise more often, particularly around sporting events, and for longer during the warm, lighter evenings.

"Drivers prosecuted for drink driving will get a disqualification, criminal record, up to £5,000 fine or a possible prison sentence. But the consequences of a serious collision could be far worse, such as the death of a loved one."

KCC cabinet member for environment, highways and waste Cllr Bryan Sweetland, said: "Most drink-driving crashes happen in the summer months and with opportunities to watch the football in a pub, at a party or organised event, the temptation for drivers to drink could be even greater this year.

"The simple message is if you are driving don't drink alcohol, or if you do intend to drink then substitute the car for an alternative way home, such as public transport."

See CSIs, guns and petrol bombs at force open day

KENT Police are holding a free family open day on Saturday, June 16.

Activities, demonstrations and stalls will be run to showcase the work the force carries out.

There will be police dogs in action, a public order demonstration complete with petrol bombs, and a Taser display.

The public can also collect crime scene evidence with the CSIs, test their skills in a driving simulator, see if you can tell a real gun from a fake one, and visit the Stay Safe zone for advice on keeping your family, valuables and home safe this summer, including information about cyber bullying and how to manage privacy settings to stay safe online.

The event is at the Kent Police training college in Coverdale Avenue, Maidstone, and will run from 10am-4pm.

More than 700 on-site parking spaces will be available.

Firms warned of threat to fleet cars from metal thieves

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AN insurance broker claims scrap metal thieves are targeting company cars to remove valuable exhaust parts.

The catalytic converter cleans up exhaust flow, but the small amount of precious metals inside means thieves can also clean up their cash flow.

Often found inside a converter is platinum, or palladium and rhodium – all precious metals. Get enough converters and the profits from scrap can be substantial, especially as metal prices continue to rise.

From the latest national figures, there were 1,100 converters taken during 2009, rising to 2,300 in the first five months of 2010.

Bluefin Insurance, which has offices in Gravesend and Dartford, said the cost of replacement is high and damage to vehicles can be extensive.

And a spokesman added: "We know that incidents are higher in the south and east."

BREAKDOWN: Catalytic converters are targeted by thieves for their precious metal content Businesses with fleets of vehicles are particularly vulnerable because thieves can hit multiple vehicles in a single location, adding up to thousands of pounds of damage.

The broker said: "Prices for scrap metal have been on a general upward path since late 2008 which, along with the global economic recession, has revived criminal interest."

"It may only take a few seconds for the thief to remove the converter but it can cause major disruption to a business if several vehicles are targeted, costing a small fortune to repair and halting operations."

"Vehicles that sit higher from the ground, such as trucks, pickups and SUVs are particularly vulnerable to catalytic converter theft because thieves can slide underneath without having to jack up the vehicle."

"Corporate fleets should take precautions to protect their vehicles, such as storing them in a locked building or yard where possible. Installing security lighting and cameras will also act as a deterrent to thieves."

While the insurance company found thefts had risen around the UK, Kent Police said they have managed to reduce numbers in the county.

A spokesperson said: "There was a 20 per cent reduction, or 65 fewer incidents, in catalytic converter thefts between April, 2011, and March, 2012. The total for the year was 262 compared to the previous year, when there was a 327 total."

"We do promote security measures to protect catalytic converters so we would like to think the figures reflect our work in that area."

Court closes down hotel after police vice probe raid

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A SIGNIFICANT prostitution operation at a hotel has resulted in it being shut down for three months under special powers used for the first time in the county.

Using the Sexual Offences Act, the Stone Court Hotel in Lower Stone Street, Maidstone, was closed using a sexual offences closure notice, after a court hearing.

Magistrates in Sevenoaks decided anyone found on the hotel premises in contravention of the order during the closure period could be liable to up to 51 weeks in prison and a £5,000 fine.

Trouble started for the owners when police executed a warrant on May 25.

As a result of the operation a 29-year-old man from Maidstone was arrested on suspicion of supplying controlled substances and facilitating prostitution; a 43-year-old man from Folkestone was arrested on suspicion of fraud and facilitating prostitution; a 30-year-old woman from Maidstone was arrested on suspicion of controlling prostitution; and a 41-year-old doorman from Maidstone was arrested on suspicion of possessing an offensive weapon.

All were later released on police bail until August 3. Police are still working on exactly who owns the hotel.

The officer leading the raid said he was concerned about fire safety and called in a brigade inspector who served a prohibition notice. The building was cleared of all residents and staff.

Inspector Simon Alland, from Maidstone, ran Operation Glare.

He said: "The order stops any person for the next three months from entering the premises.

"Closing it was necessary because people have been released on bail and there is nothing to stop what we believed was happening from restarting. At the end of the three months, we can review the situation and maybe apply for an extension."

In its closure order, the magistrates said: "The court is satisfied that during the relevant period, the premises were used for activities related to one or more specified prostitution offences."

The officer said of the scale of activity at the hotel: "I think it is significant enough that the court has granted the closure order which is the first of its kind in Kent."

Insp Alland, from the community safety unit, added: "We conducted a significant amount of work around the Stone Court Hotel and this order should help reduce reports of drug use and associated anti-social behaviour in the area.

"We have been greatly assisted throughout by contributions from the local authority environmental enforcement team, Kent Fire and Rescue Service and the UK Border Agency.

"This success shows the value of different agencies working together to ensure that Maidstone stays a safe place to live, work and socialise."

Foodbank's plea to superstores for help to feed those in need

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

DONATE: It is hoped people will give food at supermarkets

STAFF at a new Ashford foodbank are desperately trying to get supermarkets on their side.

Mark Reece said the church organisation is being supported locally by producer Premier Foods, but is having trouble convincing the big supermarkets of the benefit.

He said: "I think it's a no-brainer, but they are not forthcoming at all. Tesco are being supportive but it is a long process.

"And we have had answers from Sainsbury and Asda, which were both a definitive 'no'."

Ashford Foodbank distributed its first parcels in March, and is now feeding around 10 people a week – including young children. Organisers expect this figure to grow five or sixfold.

The number of foodbanks around the country has increased as the economic situation has worsened.

And Mr Reece is calling on the major companies to allow Ashford Foodbank to put a box or trolley at the front of supermarkets so customers can donate something as they leave the store.

Currently, they are relying on local churchgoers and others to make donations directly. Premier Foods in Ashford, which produces Cup-a-Soup, Pasta 'n' Sauce, Savoury Rice, Paxo, Bisto and McDougal products, has backed the group – and they hope to eventually be able to win over the supermarkets.

Mr Reece said: "What we are hoping is that as we become established we will approach them again and they will be more tempted.

"They are supporting other foodbanks around the country, so there are relationships, but we are new to this town.

"It's an absolute no-brainer for the supermarkets. If one of them gets on board with us, it will encourage the church congregations to go there and spend, and they get plenty of good news stories published."

And he has some tough talking for the public too, because of the 10 per cent of people's food constantly going to waste.

He said: "It is wastage on an immoral scale. Imagine if each time you were paid, you were asked to simply put 10 per cent of your wages in the bin. We cannot imagine that many people would think this is a sane thing to do, yet we continue to do this with our food."

Rabbi dies as duo get into trouble off coast

A RABBI died and another man was left needing hospital treatment after they go into trouble in the sea. The coastguard and emergency services were called on Monday morning, after reports of two men off the coast near Westcliff Road, Broadstairs, who needed help.

Both men were rescued from the water. However, Rabbi Chaim Breisch, from Stamford Hill, north London, was taken to hospital by helicopter but subsequently died.

The second man was taken to hospital for treatment.

Firefighters save cats from blaze at cottage

A number of cats had to be rescued and treated after a fire at a home in Edenbridge on Monday.

Fire crews had to use breathing apparatus as they tackled the blaze at the end-of-terrace cottage at around 10.20am.

Two fire engines and crews put out the fire and no-one was hurt.

However, several cats suffered from smoke inhalation and required treatment.

Mum begins fundraising for memorial to stillborn babies

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A MEMORIAL garden is planned for Ashford for parents who have suffered the heart-wrenching tragedy of a stillbirth.

SANDS, which stands for Stillbirth And Neonatal Deaths, was set up for families who had endured such agony.

Ashford volunteer Emma Oram joined after her son Liam was stillborn at full term.

Emma used to live in Hertfordshire where there is a special memorial garden for parents like her to sit and contemplate their loss.

But when she moved to Ashford she realised the nearest one was in Tunbridge Wells, and so she set about organising with the SANDS charity for a local garden.

She said it is a devastating experience that affects 17 families every day in the UK – 11 stillborn and six neonatal, which is death within 28 days.

She said one in every 200 babies are stillborn in this country, yet the subject still remains a taboo and the statistics virtually unchanged for the last decade.

Emma thought a memorial garden in the town would provide a major step for mums and dads towards accepting what's happened to them.

It has the support of the council and landscape architect Lloyd Bore is producing the plans based on the group's ideas.

It will be in an area inside the existing War Memorial Garden in Ashford town centre.

Emma said: "After Liam died, I knew I had to get involved in raising awareness of the very taboo, but real problem of stillbirth, and raising funds for the amazing work that SANDS does."

"We desperately need one in our area and luckily Ashford Borough Council agreed. We are now fundraising to get this project off the ground."

And she is also appealing to companies, saying for £500 they can sponsor a bench or flowerbed, and has asked residents to donate what they can to make the garden a reality. The group is also looking for a landscape gardener.

Emma said: "We would love to hear from anyone who would be interested in placing a stone for their baby in the garden. The SANDS Memorial Garden will be a place for reflection and a way for parents to express their grief and keep their babies' memories alive."

Emma has a donation page at www.justgiving.com/ashfordbabygarden. For more information on the garden and for bereaved parents who would like to know more about the SANDS Support Group, a meeting is held in Chartham Village Hall at 7.45pm every second Monday.

Racehorse's record-breaking victory in front of the Queen

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A KENT racehorse has become the world's fastest over five furlongs, with the Queen looking on as she started her Diamond Jubilee celebrations.

The incredible performance of Stone of Folca, from the original name of Folkestone, saw him take the world record over that distance in front of the Queen.

He is trained by John Best at Detling, near Maidstone, who could not be happier, as the horse's value has just soared.

Stone of Folca is owned by people holding 120 shares, which were originally bought for £555 each.

But then the horse won the Investec Specialist Bank Dash during the Epsom Derby Day meeting on Saturday, in front of the monarch.

He was a 50-1 long shot, ridden by Luke Morris, but left the rest of the 20-strong field in his wake win in a time of 53.69 seconds.

That is 0.09 seconds faster than Indigenous managed 52 years ago, a race timed using a hand-held stopwatch, which was wildly inaccurate.

The £46,000 prize money is now paid out to the shareholders at around £380 per share, almost paying the owners back in one race.

Mr Best said: "We do sell horses from here when they run well so we make a profit. I would say this horse is now worth something between £300,000 and £400,000. Many go to Hong Kong."

The Epsom course is slightly downhill, so the record is unlikely to be broken at any other track, and Stone of Folca just happened to be on his best form that day.

Mr Best said: "He is four this year. He was a fine two-year-old, then had last year which wasn't too great, and now this."

"And he did it from stall two. At Epsom no-one wins from under stall nine out of the 20 or so. A high stall number is vital to win. So if Stone of Folca had one of the higher stalls, he would have shattered all the records."

"I've always known he was quick, but sometimes he can be very hard to handle. This time though everything went like a dream."

"I believe not only was it the first time the race has been won from a stall lower than nine, but also the fastest time recorded electronically for any five furlong race. We will almost certainly take our chances at Royal Ascot, in June although that will be a huge step up."

Local jobs, for local people!

Bishop of Rochester Academy's new Principal pledges twenty new jobs for local people

The Bishop of Rochester Academy's new Principal, Colin Boxall (pictured), announced that there will be twenty new jobs at the Academy for local people.

"Local jobs, for local people." said Colin Boxall.

"The Bishop of Rochester Academy is a community secondary school, and one of the ways we intend to demonstrate that the Academy is at the heart of the local community is by employing people from the local community," he said.

Mr Boxall made the pledge of twenty new jobs for local people at a recent meeting with parents of students due to start at the Academy in September this year. Mr Boxall joined the the Bishop of Rochester Academy full time as the new Principal only five weeks ago, after working at Academy, in Chatham, part-time since January.

The Bishop of Rochester Academy has already recruited a number of Exam Invigilators for the summer exam season each year, and will also be offering permanent posts suited to local people - such as Mid-day Assistants, required from September. Other new jobs may include people to help run new after-school classes and activities on a range of arts, crafts, technology and sports during the school holidays, plus Fitness Trainers, Games Co-ordinators, Instructors, Activity Leaders, Enrichment Club and Gifted & Talented Programme Supervisors... and others!

New Academy building

New staff joining the Academy from now will be among the first to benefit from the superb working environment in the NEW Academy building. The £23 Million 'new-build', which is currently under construction on the Academy's Magpie Hall Road East Campus, will open next Spring (2013) and provide an exceptional environment in which to work and learn, with state-of-the-art facilities for all students and staff.

The Academy will be recruiting a number of Mid-Day Assistants to work at both Campuses - East Campus: Magpie Hall Road; and West Campus: Letchworth Avenue, starting September.

The role of Mid-Day Assistant is to ensure the safety, welfare and good conduct of students during the Mid-day break.

This involves supervising students in the dining areas and surrounding corridors, and the outdoor area and playing fields, to ensure good standards of behaviour by students are maintained.

These are permanent positions, and more information and Application Forms can be obtained via the website: www.boracademy.org or by contacting the Academy on: 01634 845196. Interviews will be conducted during the Summer Term.

Mr Boxall plans a number of new initiatives at the Academy over the coming weeks and months, for the benefit of Academy students which involve the local community.

Anyone living in the Medway area with any specialist skills to offer - in sports, the arts, crafts, music, technology, etc. - should contact the Bishop of Rochester Academy on: 01634 845196 or visit the Academy's website for more information: www.boracademy.org.

The Bishop of Rochester Academy is a Church of England school where everyone works and learns within its caring and supportive Christian ethos.

The Academy opened in September 2010 and has a community of around 1,200 students plus a growing Sixth Form. It serves mainly the area of Chatham within the Medway towns and we demonstrate that we are at the 'heart of the community'.

The Academy 'Sponsors' - Rochester Diocesan Board of Education, Canterbury Christ Church University and Medway Council - support us in our focus on raising educational standards and creating opportunities for the young people of Medway to achieve their full potential and to excel, with aspirations for all students to continue into further or higher education whether with an academic or vocational direction.

With 'Specialisms' in Maths, ICT and Music, we provide an innovative and challenging curriculum which emphasises achievement and high expectations of, and for, all our students. Our exam results are set to increase year on year, and Ofsted recently commented: "The new Principal's strategic vision demonstrates strong leadership... perceptible insight of what needs to be done... He is rightly focused on raising achievement." (Ofsted - April 2012)

Our new Principal brings new energy and a multitude of new initiatives to drive the future development of the Academy, to ensure our long-term success in providing a quality education for all.

Local jobs, for local people

20 NEW jobs at the Academy by September 2012

20 NEW jobs are being created at the Academy for local people - including... Exam Invigilators, Mid-Day Assistants, Sports Coaches, Fitness Trainers, Games Co-ordinators, Instructors, Activity Leaders, Enrichment Club Supervisors... and others!

DIAMOND JUBILEE

It might rain on our parade, but nothing will stop us holding a jubilee street party

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

A SEA of red, white and blue washed across the county over the bank holiday weekend as Kent celebrated the Queen's Diamond Jubilee in style.

Events took place in every corner of Kent, from street parties to special services, to celebrate Queen Elizabeth II's 60 years on the throne.

Despite the wet weather, organisers battled on to make sure the once-in-a-lifetime weekend wasn't remembered as a damp squib.

Glenda Morling, who held a party in Halfpeny Close in Maidstone, said: "The rain didn't last long; we had a downpour of about 20 minutes, but everyone had their gazebos up."

"It was a bit cold too, but we carried on through it – it was a really good day."

The community also got together in Medway, with at least 30 street parties taking place in the towns. One of those took place in The Close in Rochester and co-organiser Lynne Last said more than 250 residents joined in.

She said: "It was great to see the community coming together. Seeing the kids playing in the street like we used to was just the best thing."

"We had cake competitions, a best jubilee fancy dress contest, and a raffle to help pay for it all."

The newly-formed Gravesend Women's Institute held a jubilee picnic lunch in Gordon Gardens, and president Hilary Jones said: "Ages ranged from four to 94, and everyone had a good time. There was plenty to eat and drink, including mountains of delicious cakes and those attending donated generously to a collection for the Queen Elizabeth Diamond Jubilee Trust."

Friendly street rivalry took place in Stephen's Road in Tunbridge Wells, as residents took on neighbouring Hopwood Gardens in a tug-of-war contest, which the hosts won convincingly 3-0.

The competition was part of a series of special events including a Routemaster bus entertaining the children and a samba band performing.

Organiser Cheryl Harrison said: "It was stupendous. People have been talking about it all week – we're gutted it's over really. It was magical."

As well as the 350 street parties held in Kent and Medway, special Diamond Jubilee beacons were lit around the county on Bank Holiday Monday, joining the Commonwealth in lighting a flame as part of the celebrations.

One of the beacons was at Harris HospisCare in Orpington. In the evening, after holding a jubilee fun day, the beacon was lit by volunteer Joan Sloane and was followed by a rendition of the national anthem.

Fundraising manager Christine Davies said: "This was a fabulous evening to celebrate the jubilee. We were honoured to be an official beacon site and the local community really supported the event."

Queenborough Town Council on the Isle of Sheppey, held a community fun day at Castle Connections.

And although the weather meant activities had to take place inside, Chrissie Williams said: "It went really well, although the weather was atrocious. We made the most of it despite the traditional British weather – we all had a good time."

Ramsgate held a tea party for hundreds of children which went down well despite a couple of downpours, with jelly and ice-cream a particular favourite on the menu.

Mayor of Ramsgate Cllr David Green said: "The tea party for more than 300 children achieved a great success, despite the British weather. This was a real town effort, funded by Ramsgate Town Council and Thanet District Council and supported by too many town folk to mention individually."

LONDON 2012

Security tightened as police get set for Olympic Games

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

KENT'S borders will receive extra security during the London 2012 Games this summer as part of the major national anti-terrorism drive.

While specific details have not been revealed, it is understood security at the county's main entry points – such as the Port of Dover and Channel Tunnel in Folkestone – will be enhanced and some airspace will be controlled by the military.

Controls will be implemented around Manston airport from July 16-August 15, which will allow for increased traffic flows without interfering with the security restrictions.

Security at the Channel Tunnel includes the installation of a new system used to detect radioactive materials on the French side at Coquelles to stop dangerous material entering England.

The project was funded by the UK Border Agency and includes 11 gates across the eight shuttle access lanes and three truck shuttle lanes.

FOCUS: London's Olympic Park

An accommodation base for French security forces has also been made available by Euro-tunnel to house surveillance of the terminal. This was set up ahead of London 2012, but will be a permanent addition to resources. A patrol trail is currently being developed around the port's entire perimeter.

Security will be enhanced at the Port of Dover, but officials are keeping tight-lipped over the details.

Kent Police said there would be a visible presence of officers as the Torch relay progresses through the county in July, but that the Metropolitan Police's Torch Relay Security Team would be escorting the flame.

The county force stressed it would have more of its own officers in the county during the Games than usual, to support the Olympics operation as visitors travel to and through Kent.

Assistant Chief Constable Andy Adams said: "We are highly experienced in managing major operations while maintaining our normal policing service."

"We are making a substantial contribution to the security planning and public safety elements of the London Olympic and Paralympic Games, so the right people, with the right skills, are in the right place."

Along with every force across the UK, Kent is providing officers to support the national operation.

This will be across 56 days with a minimum of one and up to a maximum of 172 officers in any one day during the busiest periods.

A police spokesman said these were approximate numbers and could be subject to change.

KENT REMEMBERED

ON FILM: The new DVD, The Time That Is Now, celebrates the long history of Beckenham Methodist Church

Film celebrates 125 years of community worship and history

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE spectacular Beckenham Methodist Church is so steeped in history, a group of locals decided to commit its dramatic past to video.

As it celebrates its 125th anniversary this year, the DVD is finally out after the church approached Spring Park Film Makers to capture its history.

The disc is called The Time That Is Now, and includes a short history and footage of many of the groups associated with the church.

The project was filmed by a number of Spring Park members and edited ready for the first Church Thanksgiving Event in March of this year.

So what has made this house of God so worthy? It was during the 1880s that a decision was made to build a new Wesleyan Church in Beckenham. Inaugural work began in Bromley Road, and in 1887 the people were able to worship in their new church for the first time. This was an event of considerable importance to the Wesleyans in the district.

The church, with its tower and spire and walls of Kentish ragstone, held its first service on September 28 of that year, and it was not long before the debt of £1,500 remaining on the building was paid off, thanks to a generous response to an appeal on the day.

At this time, Beckenham had begun to emerge from its beginnings as a small village in rural surroundings. The site for the church was secured in 1884. The land appeared to be rich in the type of sand used for building, and Trust minutes of the time tell how the clerk of works had sold the sand excavated by the workmen for his own personal gain.

In March, 1887, a service was held in Bevington Hall when the first memorial stones were laid.

By 1932 the church changed its name to Beckenham Methodist church, a year in which the new town hall was opened by Prince George.

Beckenham itself was growing, and soon become an affluent area. This was reflected in the congregation where Sir Josiah Charles Stamp and his wife came in the 20s. He accepted the honour of Charter Mayor and in 1938 was elevated to Baron. Sadly both he and his wife and oldest son were killed in an air raid when a bomb fell on his house.

Over the years entertainment has been a prominent feature of the church, including radio broadcasts and open-air concerts in Kelsey Park.

The war years saw the hall used as a soldiers' club and in 1946 the Bevington Over 20 club was formed. Many wedding bells rang out in those early years as a result of couples meeting at the church.

The church has changed and grown too, and in 1981 the spire disappeared from the skyline due to decades of pigeon droppings, loose stone, and rusting supports.

Today we see a bright open space, and the church flooded with light from its stained glass windows. A large organ takes centre stage which was a gift from James and William Vanner of Chislehurst in 1887.

During the 1980s and 90s, the church was refurbished and the names of the various rooms were created like the Wesley Lounge, Richmond, and Handsworth Rooms.

There has been an association with Beckenham's leading chamber choir for 30 years. The South London Singers has around 40 members and meet there on Mondays. The uniformed organisations have been strong in the church since the 1920s and a busy community is attached to it.

The £5 DVD is available from the church. For more information call Joan Thompson on 0843 289 9812.

Spring Park Film Makers meet in West Wickham every Thursday. They can be found at springparkfilms.org.uk or call 020 8776 1812.

OPINION

We should all say no to abuse

Too many people suffer domestic abuse, and though action is being taken – everyone must make violence unacceptable, insists Cllr Mike O'Brien

FOR far too long, domestic violence has been prevalent in our society.

It is a serious health and criminal justice issue and the statistics are shocking – with a quarter of all women and one in six men affected by domestic abuse in their lifetimes.

This is an issue which blights far too many lives, leads to family breakups and has a long term impact on both women and men.

And it is sadly a leading cause of death amongst women aged 19-44, with two women a week dying from abuse. This is higher than from cancer or road accidents.

In Medway alone, more than 4,000 domestic abuse incidents are reported each year to Kent Police – that equates to an average of 11 reports a day, every day of the year.

But this is probably only a fraction of those affected. We know that many victims of domestic abuse don't call the police, don't know what support they can get, and are not always able to give a name to the abuse they are experiencing.

We need to let victims know they are not alone and there are people there to help.

Over the last 30 years domestic abuse has gone from a subject that was in the main not spoken about, to one that is now a focus of attention not only by the voluntary sector but also by government and other statutory agencies.

Despite the current reductions in public finances, we in Medway are prioritising this because it is too important to ignore. It is also linked to so many other social and community safety issues. For example, there is strong evidence that violence in the home influences youth violence in the streets.

In Medway, two independent domestic advice advocates have been created to assist victims and keep them and their children safe. One is in the specialist domestic violence court at Medway Magistrates Court, the other is in A&E at Medway Maritime Hospital.

Working with the Medway Community Safety Partnership, we are reaching out to all the other partners involved in tackling domestic abuse, including schools and health services so that a multi-agency group can work at senior level to tackle the challenges of cross-agency working.

Under recent changes in the law, the Community Safety Partnership is now responsible for reviewing cases of homicides from abuse, so that we can ensure enough is being done to address this issue and to prevent further abuses.

I recently addressed a service in Rochester Cathedral, given to commemorate victims of domestic abuse. The service was attended by many agencies

More women die from domestic abuse than cancer or road accidents working to support victims of domestic abuse across Kent and Medway, along with victims and survivors.

I recognise the fantastic work done by the voluntary agencies and Medway Domestic Abuse Forum in working with clients to support them, as well as the success of the Freedom programme, which provides information to women on this issue.

There is still a long way to go to ensure all people affected by domestic abuse are able to receive the support they need and for our communities and society to speak out against domestic abuse, to help effect change and make domestic abuse unacceptable not only now but in the future.

We must all say no to domestic abuse.

KOS COMMENT

Jubilee's right royal knees-up just the tonic

DESPITE the rain trying to dampen the mood, Kent's jubilee celebrations were even bigger and better than expected.

People embraced the party spirit at more than 350 street parties, using gazebos and umbrellas to shelter from the downpours.

Thousands went to London to enjoy the festivities – and even with the Duke of Edinburgh's health scare, it was clear to see that the Queen and the royal family enjoyed themselves.

No matter what your views on the monarchy, the jubilee was a chance for friends, families and neighbours to be together.

In a time of such economic despair, the extended holiday was a much-needed boost for the country.

Get used to the ban

AS incredible as it seems given the wet weather we are having, it looks like Kent could be one of the few counties still under a hosepipe ban this summer.

Most water companies are keeping the ban in place as underground resources remain low – leaving gardeners hoping the rain stays with us.

Switched off by power brokers

WE ARE warned there will be a power production shortfall in the not too distant future and that wind farms and solar panels could be our saviour.

Already our manufacturing base has been shifted abroad and our small businesses are being stifled by outside bureaucracy, meanwhile, Germany has kept its manufacturing industries.

They fully realise wind farms and solar panels will not produce the necessary power, therefore they are building a series of coal-fired generating stations – as is China.

So what are we left with?

When gales blow wind turbines have to be switched off as they may shatter. On the other hand, solar panels only work when the Sun is shining.

The grand centralised dictatorial plan will render us back to foot and donkey power.

In the meantime, we are financially bleeding to death by paying millions of pounds in obedience to un-elected, largely unknown commissioners from beyond our shores.

Meanwhile, our children are being taught in our schools how good this sick union is and how much [they say] we are getting from it. How could we have been so deceived?

Young must be nurtured

KENT Green Party will be discussing practical measures to meet the school places shortfall with speaker Becky Matthews from STEP, the campaign against selective education in Kent, at its June meeting in Wye, near Ashford.

It is alarming that Kent County Council has to find 10,700 primary school places and two new secondary schools in the next four years.

Some 800 children in Kent could not get a place at one of their three preferred primary schools, this April.

Selective schools distributed unevenly across Kent and Medway have made secondary education as much a transport policy as an education policy, with children spending large parts of each day travelling significant distances to and from school.

This could have been avoided if Kent and Medway secondary schools were all comprehensive. Coupled with fundamental inefficiencies in children's services and declining youth services, the overall picture for young people is one of neglect.

There has even been maladministration in the provision of grammar school places in Tunbridge Wells.

It is disturbing that four out of every 10 headteachers say their school buildings are unfit for purpose nationwide.

The Government is adamant academy schools do not have to keep to current healthy school food standards, undoing years of progress.

The Green Party is committed to maintaining education whilst paying off the deficit through a fair tax system.

Socking it to slow internet

LIKE many people in Thanet, I suffered from a very low broadband download speed, in my case, with BT.

After several fruitless conversations with technicians in India and being given a new hub, nothing improved.

However, a visit from a BT engineer discovered the reason for my slow speed.

The master phone socket, which had been fitted when my house was built, I assume, was unsuitable for modern usage and was replaced.

My download speed has increased substantially, so if you are suffering, as I was, do try changing your phone socket and using ADSL filters in all the phone sockets around the house. This certainly worked in my case.

Airport flies in face of reality

THERE really is no reason to spend billions on a new Thames airport.

As I see it there are already plenty of alternatives that would reduce the number of road miles travelled to catch a flight, rather than making Kent and Essex the next blighted part of the UK purely on Boris Johnson's need to have a badge put around his neck.

If anyone thinks an airport would mean lots of new long-term jobs they are very much mistaken. Building the thing would require 20,000-plus builders, but most would probably come from cheap European labour or the North, not local.

They would all need homes, so forget any chance of finding a green field or park in Kent – they will have to be built on.

So yes, we would see a local building boom, but then what?

I have been to most airports in the UK and many, if not all, would be better expanded to support larger/more aircraft rather than wiping out Kent. This would shorten road journeys which in these green times we should be encouraging. Why is it necessary for so many of our flights to be from Heathrow or Gatwick? Spread them around the UK.

Indeed, why do we need to encourage more flights in any case? It does not make the UK any more a growth economy.

The manufacturing industry of the UK has all but stopped which is why we end up with 'no-idea politicians' giving us schemes and money wastage projects to make us feel they are doing something.

I don't think you can send an email to the migratory birds to tell them not to come back either. They will be there no matter what.

I don't think anyone really has an idea of what the water or power requirements would be to build the airport or to provide its future needs, as well of those of the area that will be decimated by gross house building.

Forget rain catchment. We would need at least two desalination plants and two power stations. Ahh, but that's jobs isn't it? Well no not really. Labourers, perhaps 1,000, but all the skilled jobs to run either type of plants would come from outside the area. And don't forget once everything has been built where will the on-going jobs for all these people come from?

I hope the sheer cost of this idiotic plan makes people stop.

Whatever the estimate they come up with you'll have to double it. The cost to the destruction of Kent will be wholesale, so we might as well concrete over the South East and be done with it.

This will ruin Kent even more than the current London overspill plans along the Thames corridor. Oh and, of course, those very house building schemes will be under the flight path of the new airport. Yet more sense.

Worth going the extra mile to get missing 5p

Q MY employer is paying 40p a mile when I use my own car on business, rather than the recommended 45p a mile. Are you able to say how I can claim the additional 5p?

A THERE is no legal minimum that an employer has to pay when you use your car for business purposes.

But HM Revenue & Customs has set 45p a mile as the amount you can be reimbursed by your employer without facing any tax bill. This tax exemption applies for the first 10,000 miles of business driving each year. Above this, the taxman will allow 25p a mile.

If your employer pays more, then the surplus is taxable.

Your problem is your employer does not pay the full amount. This means you can claim tax relief on the 'missing' 5p a mile. The cash value of this tax relief depends on the rate at which you yourself pay tax.

For example, if you pay tax at 40pc, the tax relief is worth 2p a mile in your pocket.

But here's another thought. Why does your employer pay 40p a mile? My guess is that this rate was set a few years ago, when the Revenue exemption was itself 40p a mile.

It might be worth telling your boss that the taxman increased the figure to 45p in April last year.

Q IT IS likely that I shall be made redundant. I have been told I am entitled to three months' pay in lieu of notice, a few thousands pounds due under a bonus scheme, and then an additional £20,000 redundancy payment.

The figures I have been given show that tax will be due, yet someone I know who was made redundant from a different company insists he got £30,000 and paid no tax.

How can he get £30,000 and pay no tax, while I stand to get less than £30,000 yet will pay tax?

A THE basic rule is that redundancy payments up to £30,000 are exempt from tax.

However, not all the money you are expecting is classed as redundancy pay.

If your contract of employment entitles you to pay in lieu of notice, this is taxed in the same way as if you had worked normally during the notice period.

Similarly, if you had carried on in your job and received bonuses in the usual way, then that money would have been taxed, too.

All that escapes tax is any payment that is linked only to your redundancy, and not to the notice period, the bonus scheme or anything else – such as holiday pay – that you would have received if the job had lasted.

TONY HETHERINGTON
MONEY CLINIC

And that is why only your £20,000 will sidestep the taxman.

Q I REACHED 65 in February. I have a small private pension plan, and I intended to delay drawing the pension in the hope the fund would grow.

However, the pension company says annuity rates for men will be dropping in December, to bring them into line with rates for women. Are you aware of this, and how is it likely to affect me?

A I AM aware of this new rule, which will affect every man who retires after December unless he is lucky enough to be in one of the few remaining final salary pension schemes.

Everyone who saves for retirement in a 'defined contribution' scheme should understand that they have their own individual pension pot.

When they reach retirement, that pot is used to buy an annuity – a pension for life. Annuities are based on how long the pension provider thinks you will live.

Pension providers have always given men a better annuity rate because men die younger than women, bringing the annuity to an end.

The EU did not like this. Officials in Brussels regarded it as sex discrimination, so they are making it illegal from December.

Annuity rates change frequently, so nobody can predict the exact impact.

As an example, though, £10,000 would currently buy a 65-year-old man a flat rate pension of £587 a year from Legal & General, while a woman would get £562. Everyone in the industry expects male rates to fall at the end of the year.

Q I HAVE used up my Isa allowance, but would like to put £2,000 into an instant access savings account. Which pays the best interest?

A THE Online Saver account from Coventry Building Society (www.coventrybuildingsociety.co.uk) pays 3.15pc on £1 upwards, with no notice needed for withdrawals.

Clearer information is needed for customers should bank collapse

By Adam Aiken
MyMoney24 editor

THE body behind the financial services savings safety net has urged banks to give clearer information to customers about how much of their cash will be protected if the provider goes bust.

Under plans outlined by the Financial Services Authority (FSA), financial providers are to be compelled to display notices in branches and on their websites in a bid to make people more aware of deposits of up to £85,000 are protected if a bank goes bust.

The Financial Services Compensation Scheme (FSCS), which protects consumers when banks fail, said the plans were a step in the right direction, but it urged firms to go beyond the FSA's minimum requirements.

Building societies and credit unions will also need to display posters and stickers, and foreign banks with branches in the UK which are not covered by the scheme have to state this as well as saying which other national scheme is providing protection.

"The banking crisis shows how important it is for consumers to have clear information about FSCS protection," said FSCS chief executive Mark Neale.

"We never again want to witness the run on a bank because people do not know their money is protected.

"Since then, the industry has improved the quality of information it gives to consumers about FSCS.

"However, it needs to do much more to provide clear, accurate information about the protection we provide. This is essential to building consumer confidence, and is not limited to deposits. It is something that is normal in other parts of the world."

The FSCS protects consumers if banks, building societies or credit

SAFE: More needs to be done to protect customers' cash if provider goes bust unions go under. The safety net has paid out more than £26 billion in compensation to more than 4.5 million people since 2001.

"We have been working with major firms in a bid to get them to go the extra mile in building awareness of the scheme," said Mr Neale.

"We are grateful for their support and hope they will lead the way. We encourage all banks, building societies and credit unions to have stickers on display, posters and information in branch, and on their websites.

"Go the extra mile. Tell consumers about the FSCS. It is good for consumer confidence. And that is good for the industry, too."

The FSCS recently launched a £4 million publicity campaign in a bid to raise the scheme's profile, but it has since acknowledged that awareness has not been raised to the levels hoped. The scheme covers savings up to £85,000 for single accounts and £170,000 for joint accounts if an institution goes under.

While the scheme covers deposits held with UK banks and subsidiaries of foreign banks which operate in the UK, it does not cover money held with UK branches of European banks, which are covered by the relevant compensation scheme in the country where the bank has its head office.

The compensation limit applies to money lost per banking licence and not per individual brand, meaning consumers who want to remain within the limit have to know which banking group owns any individual brand.

Falling house prices mean many homeowners may be due thousands in inheritance tax rebates

THOUSANDS of Britons may have paid more inheritance tax (IHT) on residential property than they should have.

IHT – which is based on the value of the property at point of death – can be reclaimed if the property sells for less within four years.

With house prices falling by more than 10 per cent over the last four years, tax specialists at NFU Mutual said that up to £90 million in tax could be reclaimable. This equates to an average rebate of £4,260 among an estimated 21,000 estates that included residential property over the past four years.

People who inherited between June, 2008, and February, 2009, and between June, 2010, and August, 2011, are the most likely to be eligible to get money back.

"Many people don't realise they can claim back IHT if the property they inherit sells for less than it was valued at during probate," said NFU Mutual's Sean McCann.

"And with house prices generally falling over the last four years, thousands of people could still be able to claim back any such overpayment."

NFU Mutual's calculations were made using a combination of IHT breakdowns from HM Revenue & Customs and monthly house price data produced by the Land Registry.

Lack of credit and withdrawal of overdrafts crippling small firms

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

BRITAIN'S small businesses are continuing to suffer because of a three-year lending drought and many are unable to obtain credit at any cost, the Bank of England has warned.

And to make matters worse, many are having their overdraft facilities withdrawn, the BoE says – meaning a cashflow problem is much more likely to mean closure.

Current figures reveal that more than 50 firms across the UK close each day – and Kent businesses say the lack of bank capital is holding back expansion plans that would create jobs, stimulate the economy and increase cashflow.

Some firms that managed to get a loan said they had seen the interest rate increased, while fees levied on loans had also gone up, the BoE's report on business conditions found.

The report states: "Some firms had responded to tighter credit conditions by seeking alternative forms of finance, from wealthy individuals or institutional investors, such as pension funds.

'DOUBLE-DIP DANGER': Pam Loch

"It had become harder to secure long-term funding from banks, increasing the frequency of re-negotiations and attendant charges."

More than 50 companies every day are collapsing, according to a separate study. A total of 1,564 failed in April, and numbers are far higher among smaller firms, the survey by information firm Experian found. Of the total, it said 688 employed 10 people or fewer.

Toby Perkins, the shadow small business minister, said: "Businesses are going under every day. Too many are struggling to get the finance they need to grow and take on extra employees."

He also slammed the Government's answer to the credit crunch, the National Loans Guarantee Scheme, as "failing to make a difference".

Christopher Shaw, chief executive of alternative finance firm Platform Black, said: "This latest Bank report confirms once and for all what any company director knows. Small and medium-sized firms are not getting credit and, worse still, are having their overdrafts cut or pulled. In the rare cases where credit is available, it is getting more expensive.

"We are experiencing a mixed reaction at the moment to confidence in the economy from our clients, contacts and suppliers. There is still a great deal of caution and we have been involved in advising on restructurings again where businesses are aiming to reduce their headcount. However, we do have many clients who are recruiting again and recognising it could be a good time to expand through acquisitions or mergers rather than sitting still."

Pam Loch is managing partner of Tunbridge Wells-based Loch Associates Employment Lawyers as well as being president of the West Kent Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

She said: "From my involvement with businesses, I've spoken with directors and business-owners who are keen to expand their business but simply can't access the capital to do so, despite the Bank base rate being the lowest it's been in decades. The reluctance of financial institutions to lend to businesses due to economic uncertainty is quickly becoming a self-fulfilling prophecy in itself for a double-dip recession.

"In our capacity as employment lawyers, we're aware that clients still feel there is a need to reduce their overheads as they face rising costs. The Government's pledge to inject £75 billion into the economy is a timely boost to business confidence, but we do need even more measures put in place to help the SMEs at the heart of the economy."

TRANSPORT

Travel firm set to cut carbon emissions

CHALKWELL Coach Hire & Tours is carrying out a full commercial trial on Energenics fuel-saving additive Envirox across the whole of its fleet of 61 coaches and buses.

An additive dosing unit will be installed at the company's main depot in Murston, near Sittingbourne, and the bulk diesel fuel-storage tank will be treated with Envirox for an initial nine-month period.

Envirox is based on a well-known oxidation catalyst used widely in catalytic converters. The material has been re-engineered using nanotechnology to allow it to be delivered as a diesel fuel treatment. This ensures a cleaner burn within the combustion chamber, resulting in improved fuel efficiency and lower emissions.

Clive Eglinton, managing director, said: "As well as the potential financial benefits, we see this as a means of improving our environmental performance. We are targeting an average fuel saving of 4 per cent, equivalent to 58 tonnes of CO₂ on an annual basis. Already 28 vehicles in our fleet have diesel particulate filters fitted, but we expect to remove a further 27kg of particulate emissions per year from the rest of the fleet through the use of Envirox."

Mike Attfield, of Energenics, said: "We are delighted to welcome Chalkwell as a customer. This will be a valuable opportunity to validate Envirox in a mixed coaching and bus operation."

AWARDS

Now is the time to ensure your business talent is recognised

A BUSINESS-awards event has been launched at a gala reception.

Bromley Business Awards 2012, the second in the annual series organised by South London Business, was launched at Biggin Hill airport, the title sponsor for this venture that rewards and celebrates dynamic and innovative businesses.

Robert Walters, business-development manager at Biggin Hill Airport Ltd, said the airport company was strongly in favour of the purpose of the awards and pleased to be associated with the new season series as principal sponsor.

"The goal is to promote business in Bromley and to highlight those companies that are taking extra steps to help provide employment and prosperity while demonstrating outstanding innovation and skills," said Walters.

Coach-carrier claims green tourism award

EUROTUNNEL has been awarded for its commitment to reducing the carbon footprint of coach-carriers.

At the 2012 Coach Tourism Awards Eurotunnel Le Shuttle won the inaugural Coach Tourism Green Award.

The awards brought together more than 360 professionals and members of the coach tourism community, and Eurotunnel's prize was awarded by readers of Coach Monthly.

Eurotunnel is the only cross-Channel operator to carry out an annual carbon audit and has reduced its greenhouse gas emissions by 56 per cent since 2006. Le Shuttle continues to innovate to save energy, protect air quality, manage waste and water and control noise.

Jo Willacy, Eurotunnel commercial director, said: "Eurotunnel Le Shuttle is delighted to be recognised for the continued efforts of its teams to minimise the impact of its operations on the environment and to offer passengers the greenest way to cross the Channel by coach.

"Our latest innovation, which is proving very popular, is an eco-comparison tool that allows coach operators to calculate their carbon savings when taking Le Shuttle."

The editor of Coach Monthly, Stuart Render, said: "Eurotunnel Le Shuttle plays a key role in delivering a high quality of service to coach operators across the UK."

Skills drought the biggest barrier to recruiting staff

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A LACK of skilled applicants continues to plague businesses, according to a new report.

The latest quarterly Tracking UK Recruitment report by professional staffing recruitment consultancy Barclay Meade shows more than half (54 per cent) of firms citing candidate skill shortage as their biggest barrier to recruitment.

According to the report, the first quarter of 2012 saw a 10 per cent rise in the number of local firms whose plans to strengthen their workforce were hampered by a dearth of candidates possessing the skills required to fill a vacancy.

Meanwhile, more than a third of bosses (34 per cent) in the South East feel the expense of hiring new staff is prohibitively high, a rise of 19 per cent from Q4 2011.

But, despite this, the report by Barclay Meade – part of the AIM-listed recruitment business Matchtech Group PLC – revealed almost two out of five (37 per cent) bosses in the South East were more confident about recruiting than they were in the previous quarter. Just 7 per cent declared themselves 'less confident'.

Overall hiring levels among firms in the region dipped slightly throughout the three months to March. Just over 40 per cent of business-owners said recruitment levels were similar to those before the financial crisis began in September 2007, although the number operating under a recruitment freeze rose from 17 per cent in Q4 2011 to 22 per cent, the highest level of any region in the UK and considerably higher than the national average of 13 per cent.

Among those firms in the South East that do expect to be hiring in the next quarter, 37 per cent are planning to take on administrative staff; almost a quarter (24 per cent) aim to recruit graduates; and one in 10 expects to appoint senior managers. Encouragingly, two-thirds of firms in the region said recruitment activity was to support business growth plans.

Barclay Meade's Tracking UK Recruitment 2012 Q1 report also revealed:

■ Two-thirds of businesses in the UK feel restricted by the Government's employment legislation and would like to see changes made to help them fulfil labour solutions.

■ While experts continue to debate the future economic landscape, the general consensus among the UK business community is that the outlook is hopeful. Almost two-thirds (65 per cent) of firms are 'cautiously optimistic' about

WRITE-OFFS? More than half of firms said skills shortages were their biggest barrier to recruitment trading conditions during the next six months.

■ The expense of hiring new staff is an increasing problem for employers, with 52 per cent reporting it as a barrier to recruitment in the first three months of 2012, up from 20 per cent in Q4 2011.

Nigel Lynn, managing director of Barclay Meade, said: "The jobs market in the South East took a small backwards step in the first three months of 2012, and the region is home to the largest number of firms operating under a recruitment freeze."

"But the findings from our report suggest their plans and growth ambitions are being hindered by a lack of adequately-skilled staff, which is a huge concern. Investing in talent can improve the commercial value of any organisation, but this is obviously dependent on that talent being available in the first place."

"Yet despite hiring activity falling, business outlook for the next six months remains positive across the region, illustrated by the increase in the number who are optimistic about trading conditions over the next six months."

OLYMPICS

Planning ahead is the way to go

WITH the Olympic torch relay making its way around the UK, the final countdown to the London Games is well and truly on.

Which means now is the time employers should pre-empt potential difficulties by planning ahead, says Melissa Edmond, right, of leading regional law firm Furley Page.

"The Olympics have the potential to lift employees' spirits at a time when the economic climate threatens morale and it would be a shame to miss such a great opportunity," said Edmond, a solicitor in the employment-law team. "Time off and time-wasting are likely to be the main issues employers encounter."

"Holiday requests will be high as the Games fall within the busy summer period and staff may request time off to volunteer if lucky enough to have been selected as one of the 70,000 Games Makers."

Edmond will be cheering on the torch relay when it passes the offices of Furley Page in Canterbury in July.

She advised that consideration should be given to how holiday policies would be operated and the easiest method to avoid complaints might be a first-come-first-served basis. When it comes to volunteering, employees have no legal right to time off work for this, so employers may ask staff to take annual or unpaid leave.

Edmond added: "Holiday requests and unauthorised absences may be minimised if employers provide television coverage for key events – subject to having the appropriate licence, of course – or if employees are allowed to watch the Games on their computers."

"Such arrangements will hopefully foster a positive atmosphere in the workplace, but reasonable limits should be set out."

"It would be unrealistic to suggest that the biggest sporting event in the world will not cause employers any disruption. However, planning ahead should help."

"To be the host of the Games is a once-in-a-lifetime event and the opportunity to engage the workforce and encourage motivation through it should not be missed."

Bluewater college for students shopping for computer and engineering courses

A NEW university technical college is set to open in Kent called UTC Bluewater, but its students won't be specialising in shopping.

Some 15 UTCs around the UK have been approved by the Government, and each one will specialise in a particular area.

For instance, Warwick UTC, supported by Jaguar Land Rover will concentrate on engineering. And Heathrow UTC with British Airways and Virgin Atlantic behind them, will do aviation engineering.

UTC Bluewater, sponsored by Eurostar and Bluewater, will be doing computer science and engineering.

It has been put forward by the Leigh Technology Academy in Dartford.

Leigh Academies Trust chief executive Frank Green, said: "The range of people and organisations we have been able to bring together across our community have been united in the need for the development of a high quality, technically based education.

"It will provide the level of technical skills as well as academic learning required for the regeneration of the manufacturing base in the borough of

BLUEWATER: Famous for shops, it is now home to a university technical college

Dartford and in Kent Thameside, which has such a proud history of pioneering scientific and technological developments.

"The opportunity for young people, both girls and boys, to make a change at 14 or 16 to an outstanding technical education will provide more choice for them so more students can access the education and training that best suits their talents.

"We see this as an opportunity to be a significant part of the re-building of the manufacturing capacity as the development of the vast business and commercial space around Ebbsfleet is developed.

"We have deliberately made manufacturing and computer engineering the two pillars of our UTC, as these are essential areas for development and growth in the 21st century."

The UTC is being supported by Bluewater, Eurostar, Kenard Engineering, NWKC, Greenwich University, London Chamber of Commerce, RK International, and Caterham Cars.

The idea is the colleges will work with local employers and universities to train more than 20,000 young Brits as engineers and scientists, alongside the usual academic qualifications.

Education minister Lord Hill said: "There is a lot of enthusiasm from employers, universities, pupils and parents for high quality rigorous technical education.

"They provide more choice for children as well as helping provide the kind of highly-skilled technicians our economy needs. The response from employers to UTCs speaks for itself."

But Christine Blower, general secretary of the National Union of Teachers, said 14 was too young, and added: "Separating 'technical' or 'vocational' education from mainstream schools will lead to a two-tier system with technical schools being seen as the poor cousin."

The ages that will use UTCs are 14-19, rather than 11-18 as in a school, and there is no entrance test for the up to 800 students.

Mr Green said: "They are a radical solution to the inadequate number of technicians and engineers. Students spend two days a week on practical study and three days a week on academic study linking the hand with the mind.

"It is quite intensive. It significantly increases the amount of teaching time, adding a whole extra year of instruction for every two years a student is in the UTC, and extra-curricular activities are compulsory."

Free local history training event for teachers as online unit goes live

A NEW partnership initiative is aiming to make teaching local history more engaging for teachers in Kent.

The Canterbury Local Heritage Partnership is hosting a continuing professional development event for teachers on Wednesday, June 27, at Canterbury Christ Church University.

The free half-day event is aimed at sharing best practice for local history studies, bringing together experts from English Heritage, the Historical Association and other partners with teachers and students from four local schools to showcase new ideas and approaches to teaching local history.

The training session will include an expert-led local history continuing professional development session, to coincide with the launch of an online unit on local history created by Andrew Wrenn and English Heritage's education team.

"Teachers often create their teaching plans in relative isolation, and particularly when you are teaching a subject like local history where there may not be quite as many resources available, it can be quite challenging to create an engaging and stimulating scheme of work," said English Heritage's regional education co-ordinator, Rachel Hudson, who is based at Dover Castle.

"This workshop day will not only give teachers the chance to see some new approaches, but also to talk to other teachers and pupils about what they enjoyed most about their local history studies, which should provide inspiring ideas to implement, both in and outside the classroom.

"Whilst facts may change from town to town, the techniques and ideas can be applied in any location."

The workshop runs from 10am-12.30pm. Anyone wishing to attend can contact Rachel Hudson on rachel.hudson@english-heritage.org.uk or call 01304 204475.

Interns on the fast track at GForces

BEARSTED-based GForces, a web management company for the UK's automotive sector, has received glowing feedback from work-placement students who have taken part in the company's internship scheme.

GForces takes on undergraduates and students from nearby schools, universities and colleges, enrolling them in its Training Academy to gain experience in a wide range of disciplines, including web marketing, graphic design, web development, project and account management, and content and project support.

The academy gives students breadth and depth of real-world experience, and in some cases those who do well are offered full-time positions.

The new extension to its Caring Lane HQ has enabled GForces to step up the work of its Training Academy.

Some 23 young people have been given internships at GForces over the past 12 months. Many of the internships have been organised in co-operation with the Kent Educational Business Partnership – an organisation which seeks to bring education and business together to create the next-generation of skilled employees.

Intern Camille Thompson: "The internship taught me a huge amount, and best of all, after the month was up I was offered a full-time position."

Schools & education

Pupils organised for competition

A PROTOTYPE computer-based organiser designed and marketed by four Year 10 students has won a business competition run by the Connexions career advice service.

The Big Business Pitch was run at The Chatham and Clarendon Grammar School Federation in Ramsgate and it generated a range of interesting and innovative ideas from the young competitors.

Staff member Eunice Scott-Smith co-ordinated the event. She explained: "Each group had to produce an A4 poster for their product or service, a financial statement, a marketing plan, and a prototype."

"During the competition weeks Connexions provided motivational speakers including Moira Cameron, the first woman Beefeater at the Tower of London, Paul Chandler who is the marketing manager for Scalextric at Margate-based Hornby Hobbies, and Beverley Aitken from Maidstone-based chartered accountants Day, Smith and Hunter.

"Six teams made it through to the school final where they had to present their product or service to a panel of judges and their peers.

"The judges were very complimentary of the standard reached in a very short time.

"The winning team produced a fantastic product with a very slick Powerpoint presentation and fielded numerous questions from the floor. Well done to all the teams who worked so hard."

The Big Business Pitch winning team who developed the organiser was made up of Kate Weedy, Hannah Blount, Charlotte Crabb, and Louisa Webb.

Broadcast students hit right note with 'professional' music show

BROADCAST Media students at the University for the Creative Arts (UCA) have filmed a live music show at the famous Maidstone TV Studios.

Unsigned Live, a 30-minute studio production which showcased local bands, was recorded in the same professional facilities that are usually home to major network programmes, such as ITV1's Take Me Out.

Second year students on the broadcast media course, which is based at Maidstone Studios, created the show as part of a university project. They collaborated with BA (Hons) creative arts for theatre and film students at UCA Rochester who made the sets and props.

Senior lecturer for broadcast media Simon Welsford, said: "Unsigned Live was a huge success. I was really impressed with the students' attention to detail, not just on the day of filming, but also with the bands they managed to attract, the accompanying website they made, and the buzz they managed to create."

"Basing the course at Maidstone Studios offers a unique setting for our students and enables them to make professional productions.

LIVE: The show was made at Maidstone Studios

"It is impossible for this to feel like a student project because they are using a working gallery and studio, the crew have radio contact, even the presenter and bands have their own dressing rooms – it's a full-on television production which just happens to be made by students."

"We are very excited and fortunate to be able to make use of these facilities for our course."

You can watch the full show plus behind-the-scenes clips at: <http://unsignedlive.weebly.com/episodes>.

Business advice for IT youngsters

SHEPPEY students have been receiving top tips from a London IT firm about how to get ahead in business.

Nine BTEC ICT practitioner students from Canterbury College at Sheppey took part in a series of mock interviews for Norland Managed Services, designed to give them the edge in the jobs market.

They had to get suited and booted for the interviews, which took place at the college's Bridge Road campus.

Norland's IT director Barry Robinson and recruitment manager Kevin Ward travelled down from the capital to grill the 'candidates' before offering them constructive feedback and helping to improve their CVs.

The students' tutor Clare Baker-Harrison said: "The session was really useful for the students and gave them a valuable insight into the working world."

"Norland were very impressed by how seriously they took it."

The students were equally enthusiastic. Joe Risbridger, 19, said: "It not only gave me experience but helped me to realise the area of IT I wish to work in after finishing this course."

"The feedback I received from Barry and Kevin was excellent."

"They reviewed my CV and helped me understand interview areas I am good at and those that need to be developed."

Norland has been working with Canterbury College at Sheppey for several years.

Previously, the students had travelled to London to visit Norland's company head office in Southwark.

FINANCIAL SKILLS PARTNERSHIP

Diversity is key to support the young

TO help Kent's young people into jobs, the Financial Skills Partnership has responded to what it calls a "pressing need" to diversify the industry.

Alan Milburn, the Deputy Prime Minister's social mobility adviser, has released a report stating that more should be done to open professions to young people from poorer backgrounds.

His report says that too many professions recruit from a narrow range of universities and regions.

The Financial Skills Partnership has now launched Directions – a free online careers destination for young people to gain an insight into the financial sector and pursue career opportunities with leading organisations.

It helps them to find out about opportunities in the sector, which includes everything from one-day work experience through to full placements, apprenticeships and school and college programmes.

The project is accompanied by a range of outreach activities for those in education and career advisers at which employers can talk about the work of the sector and where young people from all walks of life can be inspired to consider the sector as a future employer.

Liz Field, CEO of the Financial Skills Partnership, said: "It certainly is true that a lot of progress has to be made. As well as achieving the wider goal of increased social mobility, and helping to reduce youth unemployment in Kent, industry sectors such as financial services will also improve the level of service they provide to their customers if they recruit from a wider range of young people."

"The finance industry has already begun to respond to the pressing need to diversify the industry's recruitment channels. However, the key to creating significant change is tackling the misconception that finance is an elitist sector."

"The introduction of the Directions Portal has meant that young people from all backgrounds have access to working opportunities that will open doors for their careers."

DEVELOPING SKILLS: Liz Field

UNIVERSITY OF GREENWICH

Students are the business in latest recruitment drive

THE University of Greenwich is investing in a major research and enterprise programme to forge closer links with business and give students the best possible start to a career.

As part of the recruitment drive just announced up to 20 new research professors, five world-class candidates are being sought to work with the university's international business school.

The school says its role is to form a "strong and distinctive international presence" for the university, which has strong links with central London's business community, by "researching the potential within companies for ground-breaking corporate reform and responsibility".

Another professor will lead the development of workforce and economic development policy, working closely with partners in London and the Thames Gateway.

A third post will help develop the university business school's leadership, managerial and behavioural capability.

And there are also roles for research into supply-chain management in areas including carbon reduction and foods and in the rapidly-growing field of network science, applying online expertise to social analysis.

In addition, the university is offering 50 places for fully-funded PhD research studentships.

The investment programme is being led by Professor David Maguire, the university's vice-chancellor, who took up his post in October.

He said: "Greenwich is one of London's leading universities, with three iconic campuses, wonderful staff, a diverse student body and dynamic plans for the future. If you've got energy, ability and ideas, plus a strong track record as a researcher, we want to hear all about you."

ROCHESTER INDEPENDENT COLLEGE

Budding artists show off their art and design skills

AN exhibition entitled New Directions sees, for the first time, Rochester Independent College A-level art and design students taking over the exhibition space at The Deaf Cat Gallery and Coffee Bar in Rochester high street.

The exhibition focuses on the achievements of students in a range of disciplines, recognising the sheer quality of students' work and the expertise of their lecturers.

The stunning array shows work from all art disciplines offered at the college: from textiles to graphics, fine art and ceramics to life drawing and photography.

"The aim of New Directions is to celebrate the excellent art and design work produced by our A-level students at Rochester Independent College," said Jackie Clark, director of visual arts at RIC.

"Using an exhibition space in the heart of the community will provide visitors with a unique insight into the highly-individual work produced by students from the art and design area."

"An exhibition of this kind can have a dramatic impact on students' future careers in the creative industries."

Head of art Kelly Flatman said: "We are delighted that this year we have the highest number of A-level students from RIC ever going to study art and design-related courses at universities such as UCA, Central St Martins, Edinburgh and the Architectural Association School of Architecture." New Directions is open to the public between 9.30am and 5pm from Tuesday, June 12, to Sunday, June 24.

CBI

Firms hope for recruitment but there's caution

ALMOST a third of companies in the private sector expect to recruit staff in the coming year, although one in five predicted cuts.

The figures come after research among more than 300 firms by the CBI and recruitment firm Harvey Nash.

CBI director general John Cridland said: "Businesses have been creating jobs where they can over the past few months, and it looks as though that steady trend of employment growth in the private sector is set to continue."

"But hiring plans are cautious, and pay awards in particular remain low as businesses look to make sure they stay competitive in tumultuous times."

"We have to accept this constraint as the new normal – we will only be able to afford to pay ourselves more in the long term by improving productivity and competing more effectively around the world."

"The Government and businesses must deliver on targeted action to help young people who are out of work in order to increase employers' appetite to hire them."

Two-thirds of firms said employment regulation was the biggest threat to labour market competitiveness.

PUBLIC/ COMMUNITY APPOINT

MINI SCHOOL INFORMATION MANAGER REQUIRED

Contract: Permanent (37 hours, 39 weeks per year)
Salary: Kent Range 4 (£16,145 - £16,961) pro rata per annum

We are seeking a highly competent Mini School Information Manager to take a lead within a mini school in helping with the daily needs of students. Responsibilities will include the monitoring and day to day management of student attendance and performance. Other duties will involve the administration of payment and permission slips for trips and outdoor activities as well as managing the resources within the mini school.

You will have strong inter-personal and communication skills with experience in an educational setting, ideally working with young people of secondary school age. You will have a flexible approach to work, able to prioritise tasks quickly whilst ensuring that the welfare of students remains your highest priority. Knowledge of SIMS or other IT Management Information Systems, whilst not essential, would be an advantage.

Offer of appointment is subject to a satisfactory Enhanced Criminal Records Bureau Disclosure. This school is committed to recruiting with care and safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children and young people and expects all staff and volunteers to share this commitment.

Bradstow School

Creative Committed Enthusiastic Resilient

Creative, committed and enthusiastic TEACHERS do amazing things at BRADSTOW SCHOOL

If you would like to join our team we are confident that you will find this the most satisfying job you have ever undertaken.

Bradstow is an exciting and unique residential school for children between the ages of 5 & 19. It is set in 13 acres of parkland within a few hundred metres of the sandy beaches of Broadstairs. We endeavour to meet the needs of children with autism and severe learning difficulties, many of whom have associated challenging behaviours. We have achieved international recognition for our leadership, supporting our people and for our developments in Functional Communication and Positive Behaviour Support.

Experience is not essential. What makes the difference at Bradstow is the professional and personal qualities and values of the people who are employed here. What it is that you as an individual have to offer our young people to enable them to feel safe, unconditionally valued and engaged.

You will be provided with an extended and ongoing package of induction and training. We believe that staff training and professional development, together with the other staff support systems in place, are essential in our specialised field and are at the core of the success of the school.

All teachers are fully trained and supported in Gentle Teaching, TEACCH, Prospect Positive Behaviour Support, PECS and other augmentative communication systems, as well as being provided with a wide range of other specialist skills. You will also be encouraged and supported to extend your skills and knowledge by undertaking further Degree and Diploma studies.

In addition to judging Bradstow 'Outstanding' in all appropriate categories, OFSTED 2009 said,

"The curriculum and the quality of teaching and support are exceptional"

"It is to the tremendous credit of a highly skilled and well-qualified team of teachers and support staff that they enable pupils to overcome and cope with the substantial learning and emotional barriers that they face"

"Bradstow is a very complex organization and a centre of excellence in its own field"

If you would like to join our team and help us to continue to transform the lives of these children and their families, please contact us. Working at Bradstow will be challenging and you will need to be committed to the needs of the young people and the school. In return we offer you a highly rewarding and satisfying career which will both develop your skills and prepare you for senior and/or specialist leadership posts as your career develops - with quite a bit of fun thrown in as well!

For SEN specialists, the second SEN point may be available.

For an application form and information pack please call 01843 608727 (24 hour recruitment answer machine), or email personnel@bradstow.wandsworth.sch.uk

Please note that CV's will not be considered.

Applications should be received by 12 noon, Friday 22nd June 2012.

White Cliffs Countryside Partnership

The gateway guardians

Dave Mairs meets the group ensuring England's front line keeps a place for nature

As a survival strategy, that of the late spider orchid might leave a little to be desired. With its pollination and, ultimately, existence dependent on a species of bee that doesn't occur in the UK, it is a wonder it survives on our shores at all.

And, quite possibly, without the efforts of organisations such as the White Cliffs Countryside Partnership, it wouldn't.

The organisation that started out as the White Cliffs Countryside Project came into being in 1989, a year in which just six late spider orchids were recorded on what was to become one of its core sites, Folkestone Downs. Across Kent, the only county to host the species, the population probably numbered no more than a few hundred. Extinction here beckoned.

A helping hand was needed if this intriguing plant was to have a British future, and in south Kent it came from the project, or, more particularly, from the cattle that were brought in to those sites still hosting it.

They were needed to maintain the chalk grassland that supports not just this intriguing orchid but so much other wonderful wildlife – this is a semi-natural habitat that would not exist without grazing. The landscape would revert to scrub and ultimately woodland, and hefty chunks of one of Europe's finest wildlife habitats would disappear.

And who's to say that we don't live in a part of the world where nature needs all the help it can get? Standing with the partnership's Kirk Alexander and Phil Green on the Folkestone Downs overlooking the sprawling, unlovely Channel Tunnel workings that have ripped such a gaping scar in this part of the county, it's easy to believe that here is an area in which the wonders of our natural world have come very much second best.

While the wounds of development will perhaps never fully heal, you soon discover that nature has not simply clung on here but is, to some extent at least, thriving.

This is Eurotunnel territory and, although there are legal obligations to wildlife protection, Kirk is keen to point out that the company "went way beyond what was needed by law", both in respect of the orchid and the project itself.

Phil goes further: "The project probably wouldn't have happened if it wasn't for Eurotunnel. They're not the only funders, but there's a good probability that without them this wouldn't have happened. They also help with bidding for European funding... cross-borders money and so on."

Now in its 23rd year, WCCP manages 20 sites that cover some 300 hectares of chalk grassland in the Dover and Folkestone area. There are 12 staff, but some of these are part-time, making an equivalent of eight full-time workers.

The partnership is about very much more than just one species, although the late spider orchid is unquestionably a jewel in the crown, and indeed

ROLLING BACK THE YEARS: WCCP staff (Kirk Alexander is on the right) back when it all began in 1989, left, and an expanded team some 20 years on its remit extends to more than simply conserving wildlife... it is also of inestimable benefit to people.

Huge numbers of visitors come to walk, relax or see the area's wonderful range of flowers (Folkestone Warren, for example, hosts more than 100,000 people a year), while there are now an impressive 15 participating organisations.

Vital though WCCP is in this beleaguered, overcrowded part of the world, it would not be with us were it not for the cooperation – and in some cases money – of those partner groups.

The WCCP budget is substantial, covering some £300,000 a year. Dover District Council is the 'responsible body', contributing £90,000 per annum, while neighbouring Shepway council gives £40,360 and Eurotunnel the same amount. And the good folk of south-east Kent get their money's worth...

"We're not here to deter people – we don't want to frighten them away," said Kirk. "Virtually everything we have is open to the public – we want people to come here."

So everyone's a winner, not least the late spider orchid, which in 2011 numbered an encouraging 200 individuals in the Folkestone and Cheriton area alone.

With the exception of a few individuals scattered along the downs, the next reasonably-sized colonies are at Wye National Reserve, where habitat management has also resulted in more plants. After that, there are none.

The reintroduction of cattle by WCCP (some sites had not been grazed for 50 years) as part of a wider management regime has delivered an impressive return, but we're still left with the conundrum of how this intriguing plant survives in the absence of its apparently vital partner insect.

Self-pollination? No. So how?

"They're long-lived – eight to 15 years, on average – and that helps," said Phil, a man who really does get up close and personal with the plants and has perhaps done more than anyone to secure their Kentish future.

"When numbers are high – as they are now, and were in the late 1800s and early 1900s – the chances of casual pollination by other species of insect to a couple of flowers is high.

"But when numbers had got as low as they were when WCCP started, and indeed long before, then any pollination is unlikely and in the early days there was no pollination that wasn't down to humans.

"I have to collect the pollen from a flower of one plant and place this on the stigma [the female part] of another plant's flower. The pollen is stored away in little sacs – it isn't loose, as in most other plant species – so these sacs have to be physically carried from one plant to another.

"My pollination is carried out under licence, otherwise it would be illegal to interfere with them, as the late spider orchid is legally protected.

"Occasionally, the wind or a passing animal may cause the pollen sacs to come loose and fall on the stigma of the same flower, but this would not normally happen and can't be guaranteed."

Phil's intimate intervention aside, the cattle hold the key at Folkestone Downs and at similar sites, their no-nonsense approach to wrapping rough tongues around vegetation such as the rugged tor grass and ripping it up meaning there is no fancy nibbling of the short sward so important to the chalk flora and fauna.

There is, it should be noted, more to chalk-grassland management than simply releasing a herd of cows into a field and leaving them to it. Variety of habitat is crucial if the mosaic of grasses, herbs, flowers, butterflies and all the rest with their differing needs are to thrive... there is a lot to consider and opinions on the exact methods as mixed as the range of species to be protected.

All have their intrinsic value, but it is impossible to deny the historic bond between the late spider orchid and this south-eastern tip of the North Downs, for it was on Cheriton Hill that the species was first discovered in the UK.

Its prospects look healthier than they have for years, but what of those of WCCP?

"It depends what the Government does," said Kirk. "Natural England has already had its budget cut. There are changing priorities. Everybody's cutting back and we've taken cuts before."

"We raise quite a bit of our own funding, but otherwise it's split pretty much equally between local government, central government and Europe, and private sources."

Wherever the money comes from, the continued success of the White Cliffs Countryside Partnership should be appreciated by us all.

You don't need to be a botanist or wildlife expert to appreciate its work. If you simply value the opportunity to walk in open space surrounded by some very special wildlife away from the cloying urban sprawl of the Kent coast, you had better hope this organisation is with us for many years to come.

Paolo stirs a culinary ripple across sedate Minnis Bay

LOCATED a stone's throw from Minnis Bay and nestled among its, let's say, more elderly population, new restaurant Paolo's Kitchen has brought a taste of the Mediterranean smack bang to Thanet's coastline.

And while its location may not be in the hub of the town or on the picturesque bay just seconds down the road, it doesn't matter... the food, atmosphere and interior – and exterior, although we'll get to that in a minute – are likely to draw in the crowds and place Paolo's Kitchen among the best of the isle's eateries.

The restaurant itself is cosy, understated and authentic – perhaps owing to the fact that owner and chef Paolo lived and worked in Malta – and the short menu a mix of mouthwatering Mediterranean favourites.

My guest and I ordered a bottle of white wine (£12.90) and the friendly waitress brought out a plate of antipasti – artichoke, bread and halloumi cheese with oil and balsamic vinegar – while we looked at the menu.

For my starter I chose the grilled aubergines in garlic, coriander and olive oil served with a side of natural yoghurt (£4.50), while my companion plumped for calamari fritti in burro (pan-fried calamari in butter) served with parsley, a drizzle of lemon juice and balsamic reduction (£4.50).

I don't eat calamari, but after being tempted into trying some of my guest's I gave it a go and it was absolutely delicious.

My aubergine was tasty, light and simple, something you could also imagine eating alfresco with a glass of wine in a sunny courtyard.

Which brings me on to the exterior of Paolo's Kitchen. At the back of the restaurant, patio doors lead out onto a massive area of grassed garden with what looks to be the start of an outside dining area.

If I hadn't been convinced before, I most definitely was then that here was a place likely to rival some of Thanet's favourite restaurants. If we get some of that sunshine we're all craving, this could become the place for alfresco dining.

Moving back to the menu, my guest and I chose our mains, my companion the butterfly chicken breast served on a sizzling clay plate cooked in a brandy and mushroom sauce, with hand-cut chips and Mediterranean vegetables (£13) and me the spinach and ricotta tortellini in butter and a creamy sauce (£9).

My pasta was rich and tasty and my guest's chicken packed with bags of flavour.

For dessert I chose the cheeseboard and was served a selection of delicious and unusual cheeses. My companion chose the lemon cheesecake with a shot of Limoncello on the side.

Our final bill came to £64.

The fresh and tasty food combined with a relaxed atmosphere, the rare appearance of the sunshine outside and a few glasses of wine made us feel like we were on holiday.

And if there's anything that most people fed up with this British weather want right now, it's a holiday. So if you feel like escaping from the mundane for a few hours, Paolo's Kitchen is well worth your consideration.

Hamper heralds bright new future for Strood

MORRISONS in Strood now looks a little different as it has been picked as one of only a handful of retail outlets across the UK to receive a 'Store of the Future' revamp.

And with summer picnics just around the corner, it is experimenting with some more exotic products on the shelves – alongside the traditional favourites.

Prickly pears through to Cornish Yarg cheese and Spanish fruit cherimoya can all be found in the shop.

Other delights include rambutans – hairy, spiky fruits straight from Ecuador that can be used in cocktails or tropical fruit salads or reduced down to make a simple syrup – and jelly nuts, sourced in Costa Rica and also known as young coconuts.

Beetroot houmous is a twist on a classic favourite; the beetroot creates a colourful houmous with a sweet and earthy taste.

GODINTON House and Gardens is hosting the third annual Coppice Week this month, with the UK's most experienced craftsmen running parkland courses. You can learn to carve a spoon or make a hurdle or even a greenwood chair as beginners experience the basic crafts. There will also be something more advanced for those who have already begun learning this outdoor skill. The relaxed atmosphere will take you back to the old world of coppice-workers camping in the woodland. Courses range from one to three days, with skilled teachers such as Alan Sage making chestnut gate hurdles, Sean Hellman and his east European fan birds and Richard Hobbs with an Introduction To Bent Hazel Chairs.

MATT and Sueleen, stars of BBC One's The Voice, will be playing their home-town gig when they appear at the Marlowe Studio this month. The Canterbury folk-singers narrowly missed out on a semi-final place on the popular reality show and have gained some notoriety with their upbeat live performances.

The pair were coached by Welsh singing legend Tom Jones before being voted off the show. Jones praised the couple for a range of quality performances, saying their harmonies were some of the best he had ever heard.

Tickets for the Studio gig are priced at £8 (£10 on the door) and are on sale now.

FATHER'S DAY

Fathers get their time in the sun... Dad really deserves a lovely gift BUYING presents for your father can often pose a real problem, writes Joe Bill.

There are only so many pairs of socks, slippers and suit ties that one man can own. And if they are anything like my dad, then the old advice of 'Buy them something they wouldn't buy themselves' is a daft rule because they won't use it and it will gather dust like so many other boxes of cufflinks and aftershave.

Dads are pretty handy most of the time - they can put up shelves, cook a barbecue and give you wise words on how to hang up on cold-callers from far-away lands, so this year why not go the whole hog and really treat Pops? He deserves it.

Look out for top red-letter days to take Dad back to his youth or even give him a wholly new experience.

For example, if he is an aviation fan, why not bag him some flying lessons in a light aircraft? There are several options for once-in-a-lifetime experiences in Kent - just get in there early to make sure you get one booked up.

Is Pa a green-fingered gardener? Why not give him a tour of a local garden centre and offer him a voucher to the value of your choice?

Alternatively, perhaps you think it is time he did spend more hours in the garden. So purchase a starter kit with tools, seeds and ideas to get him started.

It is also often the case that at restaurants and on family meals Dad will pick up the bill. Buck the trend this year and share between you and your siblings the cost of the meal so your elder can for once eat for free!

There are plenty of offers around at Kent eateries at this time of year, and especially for Father's Day as they look to attract those who have run out of other gift ideas.

For the sporty dads out there, it can be difficult as the rugby and football seasons are finished before Father's Day comes around. But don't fear, the cricket season is here and Kent's home of cricket at Canterbury is always happy to welcome new spectators.

And before we forget, always think outside the box. The box office, I mean. Take in a gig or a theatre performance at one of the many Kent venues that now attract top UK comedians as well as the finest touring companies.

There are many gifts you can give to your father this year - and they don't have to come from supermarket shelves. Remember, a dad is for life, not just for slippers.

Eating Out

Dunkerley's marks 25 years at the top

IT'S that time of year... roll back the clouds, bring on the sunshine, search out the flip-flops. Destination Deal.

More precisely, destination Dunkerley's Hotel and Restaurant as owners Ian and Linda celebrate 25 years of success.

With a sunny terrace for alfresco dining and modern, classy interior, the eatery is the picture of Britain but with a pinch of Continental elegance.

And with long-serving staff, an enviable reputation for quality food, excellent service and prime location, Dunkerley's top pair can afford a quick reminiscence of their past quarter of a century.

Starting out life as a modest seafront café in 1987, Dunkerley's has gone from strength to strength, offering 16 comfortable en-suite bedrooms, while the kitchen provides food worthy of two AA Rosettes as well as the prestigious recommendation from Michelin.

And for Ian, maintaining quality is as important today as it was the day that Dunkerley's opened.

He said: "We are always modernising, changing our styles both with our food and the décor of the hotel and restaurant. We don't want anything to become stale. We want the quality of our food and our staff to remain at the very top."

Quite literally a stone's throw from the sea, Dunkerley's offers an idyllic place to sample local ingredients straight off the boat.

"Whether we're picking out the mussel shells steamed with a little tippie, cracking a claw of crab or lobster, shelling the prawns, or winking out the whelks, cockles and clams, we all love to graze on a hot summer's day.

"We want to soak up the atmosphere and wash the whole day down with generous supplies of the very best from the wine cellars."

Few restaurants can boast 25 years, as many fall in and out of fashion, change ownership and alter cuisine, but, like a good vintage wine, this diamond in Deal's culinary crown continues to mature and improve.

Having cooked all around the world and for many celebrated guests, Ian has also had passing through his hands some of Britain's top chefs, including Great British Menu stars Daniel Clifford, of Midsummer House, Cambridge, and Charlie Lakin, Marquis At Alkham head chef.

Ian himself trained as a chef at Thanet Technical College before taking the position of commis chef at Browns Hotel in London's Mayfair, where he really learned his trade.

He said: "The learning cycle of a chef is demanding and uncompromising. You are driven by fear and intimidation from self-acclaimed gods of the kitchen.

"The chef de partie bows to the sous chefs and ultimately the head chef. But the few who survive the early barrage soon enjoy the camaraderie of the kitchen brigade. Hot, intense but passionate about their skills, catering is a way of life, not just a job. Those who treat it as just a job rarely survive."

Aged just 21, Ian took the head-chef position at the popular Woolpack Inn at Chilham. After further successes at The Royal Hotel in Deal and others, Ian and Linda bought the small seafront café Pegasus and started Dunkerley's.

Ten years on, they purchased the Pier Hotel next door and have now developed the buildings into the business that we see now.

Ian and Linda will be having a bash to celebrate their 25 years. Former employees and friends will be invited to join the fun, but the eye will never be taken off the ball for long. "The race for quality has no finish line," said Ian. "Don't ever think you have arrived."

You can see Buddhist and Stuart antiquities and paintings as well as Jacobite treasures, including the blood, hair, heart and garter ribbon of James II. For refreshments, try out the local Larkin's Ale and an all-day BBQ. There'll also be fun activities for youngsters. See www.chiddingstonecastle.org.uk for more details.

Royal visitor to share his art Craft show

Quex Park, Birchington

Sat and Sun, June 16-17

01843 823 307

www.midasleisure.co.uk

THE Midas Leisure Grand Craft And Gift Show heads to Quex Park next weekend, with royalty expected to visit. Prince Abimbola Olanikan will be exhibiting artwork from his Nigerian homeland with a friend, having contributed hugely to the development and promotion of arts there. There are expected to be more than 40 stalls ranging from photography, handcrafted soaps, cards, quilts and towels, jewellery and fudge and nappy and towel cakes to accessories for the home like fused glass, doorstops and cushions. You can have a go at crafting yourself, with the regulars from Quex Craft Village showing how it's all done. There will be a barbecue and a beer tent, with other refreshments served in the shack.

St George's Church, Deal

Saturday, June 30

01622 691212

www.kent-music.com

KENT County Youth Orchestra has announced that it will be performing at the Deal Festival Of Music And Arts this year. Some of the county's most talented young musicians can rub shoulders with artists from around the globe at the festival, which runs from Friday, June 29, to Sunday, July 8. At St George's Church, High Street, Deal, the group will play Dvorak's epic Cello Concerto and Tchaikovsky's passionate Sixth Symphony. The church grounds open at 6.30pm for pre-concert drinks. Tickets are £15, £13 for Deal Friends and £7.50 for students, available from the Deal Festival Of Music And Arts box office on 01304 370220 or online at www.theastor.org.

Hear the siren Air-raid days on the cliffs

Dover Castle

Open from 10am-5pm
01304 211 067

www.english-heritage.org.uk

VISITORS to Dover Castle on the first Friday of every month will be able to see an original Second World War Morrison air-raid shelter, part of a new Home Front Exhibition. As a wartime wireless plays music and makes public-announcement broadcasts, visitors will be able to find out about Morrison and Anderson shelters and pinpoint the public shelters around Dover on maps and photographs. There will be information and exhibits on the volunteer services in the area, including Air Raid Precaution Wardens and Home Front troops, plus original bandages donated by the family of a nurse who worked at Hothfield Hospital, near Ashford. Youngsters will be kept on their toes with children's drills and the chance to discover if service life is for them.

Art in Medway comes of age A mean scene

Nucleus Arts, Chatham Art Centre

Saturday and Sunday, July 7-8
www.nucleus-arts.com

TAKE a peek into the heart of Medway's creative and artistic hub with an open-house event at Chatham Art Centre. As part of the Medway Open Studio And Arts Festival, the centre will be showing off the area's leading artists. Exhibitors range from painters and photographers to sculptors and jewellers, with everything in between, offering the highest-quality work to view and gifts to buy. With more than 30 of Medway's top creatives in one room, this is an event that arts fans will not want to miss. Chatham Art Centre and studios will be open to the public on Saturday and Sunday, July 7-8, from 10am-6pm. The Nucleus café will be open both days for refreshments.

Irony meets pop-ska Reel Big Fish

Quarterhouse, Folkestone

Sunday, August 12, at 7.30pm
01303 858500

www.quarterhouse.co.uk

REEL Big Fish were one of the southern Californian ska-punk bands to edge into the mainstream in the mid-90s following No Doubt. Like many of their peers, the band were distinguished by their hyper stage shows, juvenile humour and ironic covers of pop-ska. The group, who will appear at Folkestone's Quarterhouse as part of this summer's Skabour Festival, had an underground following before breaking into the mainstream in 1997 when their single Sell Out became an MTV favorite. Their appearance in the movie Basketball also gained them more fans. Fronted by lead singer Aaron Barrett, they continue to release albums and tour the world relentlessly.

FOLLOWING on from the reintroduction of the short-haired bumblebee at the Dungeness RSPB nature reserve and despite some very wet weather, visitors have been buzzing along to the site's Bee Fest. Families joined in bee walks and made bee homes and the bee trail and quiz to celebrate this iconic British insect. Activities continue until Sunday, June 10, with a range of events including walks and talks. There is also the chance to buy identification guides, wildflower seeds to attract bees to your gardens and other gifts. Look out for Jubilee, the special queen bee who will be appearing at events on the Marsh throughout summer.

Zoopla merger aims to boost online offering

THE merger between Zoopla and Digital Property Group has been completed and integration of the businesses is already under way, although both companies say it will take a few months to finalise.

Once finalised, the merger will result in the creation of an important new service in the property market, as well as being of huge benefit to those who are looking for property opportunities.

Zoopla spokesman Martin Cunningham said: "We are incredibly excited about the opportunities that will result from this deal and that will allow us to better serve both our users and members.

"While we still have much work to do over the coming months, once integrated, the merged business will have an unrivalled audience, brands and proposition and we will be in a position to provide a significantly enhanced experience for users and significantly enhanced value for our members.

"We remain committed to being the most useful online resource for property consumers and the most effective online marketing resource for property advertisers.

"We do not take your business for granted and appreciate your support, which we hope will continue as we work to ensure that we are creating a world-class property-search platform with service levels and a value proposition to match."

New homes combine a traditional farmstead feel with modern style

COUNTRYSIDE Properties has launched a new range of farmstead-style homes at Horsted Park in Chatham.

The architecturally-innovative contemporary development has already been short-listed for a design award. With open countryside on three sides, Horsted Park offers a varied range of new homes in a 'village' setting amid six-and-a-half acres of open space, itself almost a third of the overall site area.

There is a range of homes available, including one- and two-bedroom apartments as well as two-, three- and four-bedroom houses.

The contemporary external design, by architects Proctor & Matthews, uses carefully-chosen materials, sourced locally wherever possible, together with architectural features to allow the homes to resemble a series of farmsteads.

Many of the homes have large picture-windows that accentuate the contemporary style and create light-filled, elegant living spaces, fitted to a high specification.

Prices for two-bedroom houses start at £199,950, with three-bedroom houses from £279,950.

Further details about Horsted Park homes are available by phoning the marketing suite on 07801 526761, emailing horstedpark@cpplc.com or visiting the website www.horstedpark.co.uk.

EURO might be a flaky word at present, either when applied to the currency or to England's football prospects at Euro 2012.

But it has solidity when talking about the second-generation Kia Ceed.

The original Ceed arrived in the UK just five years ago and transformed how the Korean brand was perceived here.

Conceived and built in Europe and the pioneer for Kia's incredible worry-free seven-year/100,000-mile warranty, it closed up on established Western stars like the Vauxhall Astra, Ford Focus and VW Golf.

But Ceed generation two (from £14,395) is in among the leaders. It's no surprise to learn that the newcomer was benchmarked in particular against the VW Golf.

It can't quite match the Golf for the driving experience, but the car's style inside and out eclipses its German rival while taking note of its best features; the dashboard is a fine example, with all the functionality of the VW but also lots of added flair. The refinement and feeling of solidity is also Golf-like.

The exterior is arguably the finest so far from the team under Kia's German design-meister Peter Schreyer – the man who penned the original Audi TT.

He arrived at Kia just as the first Ceed went into production but has since junked the brand's old 'neutral look' for a new image epitomised by the 'Tiger nose' corporate grille.

I particularly like the new Ceed's classy wraparound headlamps with integrated LED running lights.

And while I might nigger about the quality of the seat finish on mid-range Ceed 2 (from £16,395) models I tested – I'm sure an equivalent Golf is better-trimmed – the fully-spec'd flagship Ceed 4 (from £20,595) I drove certainly redressed the balance.

As ever, though, Kia price and spec overall leaves most opposition standing, while the powertrains underline Kia's progress in just a few years.

There are petrol and diesel units in 1.4- and 1.6-litre capacities, but I was only able to test the latter, which dominate the range anyway.

The 1.6 diesel is far superior in refinement, energy and economy, but the direct-injection low-emission petrol makes a good fist of it and is cheaper by £1,100 – low-mileage users may feel it's the better buy.

All manual 1.6 engines also get Kia's eco-friendly ISG package, but the 1.6 petrol is currently the only one to get Kia's new slick twin-clutch DCT auto gearbox to rival that of the Golf.

An SW or estate is due later this year, with the prospect of a racy three-door ProceeD follow-up. With the fluid lines of the five-door to draw upon, surely this will be offered with a Golf GTI-rivalling halo model for the Ceed range and Kia as a whole?

Second-generation Ceed shows quite how quickly Kia has grown

MAKING AN IMPACT: Kia, the Korean car-manufacturer, continues to impress with its cars, none more so than the second-generation Ceed, which is now a serious rival to more established names such as VW Golf, Vauxhall Astra and the Ford Focus

... some penny-pinching on the Ceed 2 seats, but then this version does come with a cracking spec including alloys, cruise control etc etc.

NOT SURE

... the Kia badge can yet threaten VW, but the Koreans must be worrying Ford and Vauxhall and really scaring the French and Japanese.

REALLY LIKE

... how Kia always looks to improve. Criticisms of the previous Ceed were promptly addressed and the new car is a huge step forward from there.

Vogue for Evoque buoys up Range Rover's distinctive 4x4

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

LAND Rover and Jaguar sales are on the march again, inspired by desirable and distinctive products – exactly what established these sister brands in the first place.

In Jaguar's case, the new impetus comes from the award-winning XF saloon – soon to be joined by a stylish Sportbrake estate.

Meanwhile, Land Rover has caught public imagination and sales with its newly-launched junior Range Rover, the Evoque.

And it really does evoke: thoughts of Range Rovers past and present helped by that chunky front end; arguments about whether the front-wheel-drive version is a proper Range Rover; or whether to have the five-door or the almost ridiculously rakish three-door coupé.

It certainly gets me ranting, since it's not my cup of tea to look at, but then I think most of its rivals look drab.

Anyway, I'm out of step with the hordes who want to buy or wish they could afford one, and I can't argue that it's terrific to be in and great for UK exports.

And I won't dispute the thinking behind the front-wheel-drive version, either, even though 4x4 purists will 'evoke' colourful metaphors as to why this is a bad thing.

Fact is, the great 4x4 fad has been more about image than true off-roading and the penny has dropped with most buyers that they are spending more than necessary on fuel, tyres and wear and tear if they buy a true 4x4 that rarely gets its feet muddy.

So a front-wheel-drive, fuel-efficient option makes sense and is recruiting many new buyers to the RR brand who see 'urban runabout' etched into the Evoque's chunky profile as much as 'country wagon'.

Many are also women, who maybe don't like their other half's bulky Range Rover Sport or Land Rover 'Disco' but still want the country-set

BETTER BY DESIGN:

Land Rover has caught the public's imagination with its newly-launched junior Range Rover, the Evoque, which not only looks good but is fun to drive image or even something that really can walk the talk – as the Evoque really does in 4x4 form.

I proved the point when driving various Evoques across moorlands, rutted tracks and cloying mud in Scotland and proving that it is worthy of the Range Rover badge.

It's easy and comfortable to drive off-road and the trademark icon-driven Land/Range Rover terrain selector makes it simple to be in the right mode for particular conditions.

And it's pretty sharp on-road, too; though relatively high, the chassis is set up to give a flat cornering stance without body-roll, yet ride comfort is surprisingly good for a car with such composure.

I've since also driven a front-wheel-drive eco-friendly eD4 (£28,950) that is also the Evoque entry model.

Powered by a smooth 150bhp 2.2-litre diesel with six-speed gearbox, this version will hit 60mph in a respectable 10.6 seconds.

Importantly, though, for those checking the brand for the first time, it should also average almost 60mpg.

Helped by a stop/start system that cuts in and out in heavy traffic or jams, it also emits just 129g/km of CO₂, so it's exempt from road tax in year one and liable for £90/year thereafter – not bad for an SUV.

It certainly feels lighter on its feet than the 4x4 and just as much fun to drive, so those who simply want the Evoque look are not missing out, and the cabin is stunning even on this entry model.

I prefer the five-door model, though; the test car was a coupé and I was struck by the poor visibility for rear passengers and for the driver through that letterbox rear screen.

And I'm no fan of the huge barn-door mirrors it wears, either; the 2008 concept car wore minimalist ones that didn't make it to the production car.

Big cat purrs for customers

JAGUAR has ended an 11-year reign by Lexus as best manufacturer in the demanding JD Power and Associates/What Car? customer satisfaction survey.

Cars are rated in four key areas: vehicle appeal, quality and reliability, ownership costs and dealer service.

Best car in the 2012 survey was the Kia Sportage SUV, with the Jaguar XF executive saloon, pictured, adjudged runner-up.

300C is better than before

CHRYSLER'S all-new second-generation 300C arrives in showrooms this week.

While it revives the retro look of the original – now seen as a motoring icon – the Fiat-owned American marque says the newcomer is better built, safer, even more lavishly equipped and more efficient than its predecessor.

Power comes from a new 3.0-litre V6 turbodiesel and prices start at just £35,995.

Gran Coupé has 6 appeal

BMW has followed in the footsteps of Mercedes-Benz and its CLS model by launching a four-door coupé this month.

The elegant new Gran Coupé (from £61,390) joins the existing two-door Coupé and Convertible models in the BMW 6 Series line-up but has been created on a stretched wheelbase to boost cabin space. One diesel and two petrol engines are offered.

Jetta diverting from the Golf course

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

GOLFS are hot – Jettas are not. Quite simply, the booted VW Golf has never been as popular as its hatchback sister.

VW tried changing its identity to Vento but got the wind up and went for Bora instead – a real shot in the foot – before reverting to Jetta with a sort of shrugged 'OK, you got me bang to rights'.

Not that you'd expect Jetta-owners to be so colloquial; their car has the blandest of images here, even if it's increasingly hard to see why.

Fact: the Jetta is huge in the US and catching on fast in the Far East.

Fact: Britain is in the fierce grip of downsizing, driven by economic and ecological necessity.

Fact: the VW badge sits somewhere between mainstream and premium, and buyers in the latter category prefer saloons to hatchbacks.

Fact: the Jetta is a decent product at a sensible price (from £17,165) and no longer simply a booted Golf. A wheelbase almost three inches longer gives it a cabin comparable to cars from the class above, such as VW's bulkier Passat.

The Jetta cabin is also typically VW, but not completely Golf, and it does have almost the same taut handling of what is now a half-sister rather than a full-blooded sibling.

Drive one for a few days as I did, and the smooth-riding car gets under the skin with its ability to please in most situations, a bit like a favourite pair of shoes... not slippers, I hasten to add.

But as you complete your unruffled journey and get out, you note again that the exterior is unexceptional, so avoid default company-car choices – silver, gunmetal or, as in the case of the road-test car, metallic light blue – and go for black or red and leave it dirty.

VW seems to know it's pushing its luck with the Jetta at present; it could offer a glittering array of fine powertrains and glamorise the line-up with a turbocharged GTI, but the German marque tried that once a long time ago...

So there is a small sober-suited selection of tax-efficient, low CO₂ yet flexible engines capable of pleasing most company-car user-choosers and the occasional private buyer, and all available with VW's smooth-shifting seven-speed auto/manual DSG gearbox (from £19,930) as well as crisp standard five- and six-speed manuals.

There are two versions of VW's lively turbo-charged 1.4-litre petrol unit (120 and 158bhp), a 138bhp 2.0-litre performance diesel and a 103bhp 1.6-litre BlueMotion Technology eco diesel, as tested here. The 1.6 diesel is a low-tax all-rounder for the Jetta that is capable of averaging almost 70mpg but also reasonably lively if you decide to cast off the Jetta's sober image.

BlueMotion Technology brings low-rolling resistance tyres, battery regeneration via braking and auto stop/start for the engine to cut emissions in heavy traffic or jams.

But we may need a rebirth of the Jetta GTI before the 'booted Golf' roars from the shadow of its hatchback sister.

- It is the responsibility of all advertisers to ensure that all advertising meets all forms of government legislation and Archant KOS Media Ltd (the "media owner") takes no responsibility for liability in errors and omissions to the content of our media.
- All rates quoted are subject to VAT at the rate currently in force at the time the advertisement appears.
- All rates within the annual advertising agreement will be rate protected for 12 months from the first date of publication under the signed agreement.
- Any unsuitable material posted on any website belonging to Archant KOS Media Ltd by the advertiser or any associated third party will be removed or refused. All passwords and security supplied to the advertiser by Archant KOS Media Ltd in relation to the use of the posting of material via the media owner's online administration tool will be the responsibility of the advertiser. The advertiser indemnifies Archant KOS Media Ltd against any damages as a result of misuse of these privileges by either the advertiser or any third party given password privileges by the advertiser.
- Archant KOS Media Ltd reserves the right to change passwords intermittently to ensure the overall and ongoing security of its websites within the public domain.
- Copyright and licenses for voice-over/music/photography or film for advertising promotions or otherwise within the various forms of media in print, online and moving film owned by Archant KOS Media Ltd must have been sought, verified or paid for by the advertiser where applicable. Approval or permissions must have been given by any potential recipient owner, all outstanding invoices in relation to the signed annual membership as a result of the advertiser's negligence in this regard and reserves the right to claim damages for any potential vexatious action via the advertiser.
- Where shrinkage of an advertisement occurs for whatever reason, the advertisement will be charged to the nearest full centimetre where it relates to the media owner's printed publications. This will NOT apply to full-page advertisements, which remain full pages even after shrinkage.
- Archant KOS Media Ltd reserves the right to omit or refuse any advertisement/commercial/web content without notice or explanation. In these terms the word "advertiser" shall be construed to include any person or organisation placing an advertisement on behalf of another.
- A guarantee of insertion cannot be given and the media owners shall not be liable for any loss or damage caused by any error or inaccuracy within your marketing content. In no case shall the total liability of the media owner for any error or omission exceed the price charged by the media owners for that advertising.
- No liability is accepted for any loss or damage alleged to have arisen through delay in forwarding replies to Box numbers, however caused, nor for the loss or damage to any artwork supplied.
- Claims for any error or inaccuracy in your media messages with Archant KOS Media Ltd must be made in writing to the accounts department within 10 days of publishing.
- Archant KOS Media Ltd accepts no responsibility for any errors or omissions made on their websites by the advertiser.
- Archant KOS Media Ltd has the right to cancel the advertiser's annual membership without notice should the advertiser deliberately publish out of date material or content on any of the media owner's online digital platforms. Archant KOS Media Ltd will seek to recover, in full, all outstanding invoices in relation to the signed annual membership as a result of the advertiser's negligence in this regard and reserves the right to claim damages for any potential vexatious action via the advertiser.
- Advertisers are requested to check their advertisements after the first insertion. The media owner will not be responsible for any errors on subsequent insertions, which have not been advised to them in writing.
- A minimum of one month's notice must be given in writing for any cancellation of the signed annual advertiser's agreement. Upon cancellation, all discounts from Archant KOS Media's standard effective media advertising rate card (July 2008-June 2009) will be recalculated and adjusted accordingly in line with Archant KOS Media's standard media rate card (effective July 2008-June 2009) and will reflect the revised length of commitment denoted by the advertiser's written cancellation. Any surcharges, refunds or costs in relation to the production of the advertiser's TV commercial for the commitment set out within the advertiser's agreement will be met in full by the advertiser as per Archant KOS Media's standard media advertising rate card (July 2008-June 2009). Discounts will be reapplied and any refunds or surcharges will be paid by either party within 30 days of the advertiser's written cancellation. Any other advertising placed must give a minimum of one month's notice and any discounts given for series bookings will be forfeited by the advertiser upon cancellation.
- Seasonal contracts, Your Professional classified advertisements or any uplift advertising within the annual contract with the advertiser will be invoiced in full - at rate card - on receipt of any written cancellation of this contract within the 12-months.
- All uplift advertisements must be booked in at least three months in advance of publication and will be subject to availability. All dates booked will be on a first-come, first-served basis.
- The advertiser must agree to the date and time of filming of any online TV advertising commercial supplied by Archant KOS Media Ltd within the advertiser's agreement. (Platinum, Gold, Silver standard of commercial). Should, for any reason, the advertiser not be available at the agreed time without giving sufficient notice (at least 48 hours), Archant KOS Media Ltd reserves the right to charge for any further TV production at its standard published hourly rate should the advertiser still wish to use Archant KOS Media Ltd's production services to complete its TV commercial or photographic imagery included in the advertiser's agreement. The advertiser will approve and accept that there are only two choices of voice-over and must be offered by Archant KOS Media Ltd. Should an advertiser wish to use other voice-overs or non-copyright free music it is the responsibility of the advertiser to pay the PHS rights should they be required to do so. Any changes to or failure to approve the TV production by the deadlines agreed between both parties will result in Archant KOS Media Ltd being given permission by the advertiser to replace the TV commercial with pictures or stills from a choice of photography supplied by the media owner until the advertiser can supply a TV commercial produced at their own cost and risk outside of this agreement. The advertiser also accepts and agrees that this action would not reduce the value or cost of their membership. Any cost of changes required to the TV commercial throughout the advertiser's agreement will be borne by the advertiser outside of this agreement.
- Each advertiser accepts that their ranking and position within Archant KOS Media Ltd's search engine will be equal to those within their category (Platinum, Gold, Silver, Bronze, etc) other than they will be ranked based on the search engine criteria of optimisation within their level (Platinum, Gold, Silver or Bronze).
- Any delivery claims made by the advertiser or discount vouchers purchased within the print or online media of Archant KOS Media Ltd and any action as a result of the public or otherwise is the sole responsibility of the advertiser. Any claims resulting from this via Archant KOS Media Ltd must be met by the advertiser.
- a. All credit accounts due for payment shall be notified to the Advertiser by the 30th day following the date of the invoice, time to be of the essence. All sums due to Archant KOS Media Ltd shall be paid in full, and the Advertiser shall have no right of set off in any circumstances.
- b. In the event that payment is not received by Archant KOS Media Ltd or RBS Factoring by the due date, the media owner shall be entitled to suspend all further advertising until payment is received and/or repudiate the contract and make any surcharges for breaking the contract.
- c. In the event that payment is not received by Archant KOS Media Ltd by the due date, the media owner reserves the right to charge interest on all overdue balances calculated on a daily basis at the rate of two per cent above the minimum lending rate of National Westminster Bank Plc from time to time in force.
- d. Notwithstanding anything in these terms and conditions or implied to the contrary, in the event of the Advertiser ceasing to use the services of Archant KOS Media Ltd (for whatever reason), the whole amount of monies due from the Advertiser to the date of cessation shall fall due for immediate payment.
- e. The Advertiser will be liable for all costs incurred by Archant KOS Media Ltd in the recovery of debts not paid by the due date.
- f. Payment may be made by cheque, credit transfer, direct debit, cash and any major credit card.
23. Any discount which Archant KOS Media Ltd may have agreed with the Advertiser shall be forfeited in the event of failure by the Advertiser to complete the contract or to meet the above credit terms.
24. Advertising Agency commission will be allowed to those advertisers recognised by the Newspaper Society, but shall not exceed ten per cent and will be subject to the terms of that recognition. This commission will not be allowed if the Advertising Agency fails to meet the terms.
25. All private advertisements and certain categories as laid down by Archant KOS Media (Publishing) Ltd must be prepaid.
26. The Advertiser agrees to indemnify Archant KOS Media Ltd in respect of all costs, damages or other charges falling upon the media owners or any of the companies within the Archant KOS Media Group as the result of legal action or threatened legal action or threatened legal arising from the publication of any advertisement or advertising promotion.
27. An order for an advertisement must amount to acceptance of these terms and conditions, and any condition placed on an order by an Advertiser shall be null and void in so far as it conflicts with them.
28. Copyright in advertisements produced wholly or partially by the media owners belong to Archant KOS Media Ltd. Advertisers may not reproduce such advertisements without the media owner's written consent. All terms and conditions stated above are in place to protect the advertiser, the media owner and the communities they serve within the public domain as well as the beneficial rights of individuals and organisations. Archant KOS Media will endeavour to always act reasonably in applying its terms and conditions. Effective from June 2008.

Main Dealer Servicing

There's still a place for main-dealer servicing

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IT'S tempting to cut corners financially during tough economic times like now. No wonder, then, that some car-owners skimp on maintenance, stretch the service schedule or even ignore booking their car in for its regular garage check.

But it's a false economy. After buying a house, a car is usually the second biggest investment we make. It should be protected by ensuring the service schedule is kept up to date and repairs are carried out promptly and competently.

Not so long ago, the best guarantee here was a full main-dealer service history, a reassuring record that everything required of the car and the manufacturer's warranty had been carried out.

But this became seen as a restrictive practice by the European Union, which made it illegal from 2002 for a car-manufacturer to insist that its cars were maintained solely by a franchised network to keep the guarantee intact.

It also meant that manufacturers had to make vehicle-diagnostics information – crucial with increasingly-sophisticated vehicles – specialist tools and updates available to independent garages and servicing centres.

So why do so many car-buyers continue to use main-dealer franchising when an independent outlet is now allowed to do the work and stamp the service book?

An obvious answer is that many car-buyers still believe it is the best way to preserve their investment and protect the part-exchange or second-hand value of the car – used-car-buyers will usually pay a premium for a full main-dealer service history.

Sceptics might argue, though, that this perceived premium is wiped out by paying higher main-dealer service costs.

It's a point, but manufacturers and their main-dealer networks have raised their game since the 2002 EU legislation. Indeed, with car sales and profits squeezed during the economic downturn, dealers have become more competitive on servicing, cost-effective service plans, enhanced customer service and ancillaries like tyres and exhausts – normally the preserve of the quick-fit centres.

They have also banked on the perception that only a main dealer's service technicians can know its cars as well they do.

And happy service customers keep coming back, seeing the latest new-car models in the showroom – that one day they may buy again.

CHECK IT OUT: The Alfa Romeo MiTo supermini is offered with a service deal, while Skoda has menu servicing on cars like the Yeti SUV

Pick a nice deal from the garage menu

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

EVERY motorist dreads a shock garage bill, especially during tougher times like now.

But many dealers have turned to offering fixed-price deals to help customers smooth out and better control their motoring budgets.

Premium brands launched the concept first, aiming to break down the perception that their servicing was pricey and played upon an owners' reluctance to jeopardise the future value of a more expensive car by having it serviced independently.

It proved such a success that more mainstream brands have adopted the same tactic, enabling them to counter ambitious independent and quick-fit operators only too happy to siphon off the steady churn of servicing work.

The plans are also flexible – some are even free. Initially, they were to cover the car's warranty period – transferable in the event of the car's sale – or on an annual basis, but many brands have followed up with one-off deals or monthly instalment options, recognising that many drivers like to break down their motoring budget into more manageable chunks of money.

Best advice is to ask your main dealer about the menu of schemes available and get advice on the pros and cons of each one. The blurb for such schemes uses the word 'policy' a lot, for that is virtually what they are: insurance policies for servicing and the vehicle warranty – a cost-effective but necessary part of the month-by-month/annual cost of running a car.

Be aware too, though, that cars are increasingly reliable and warranties worth more.

The standard warranty is still three years and/or 60,000 miles, but a recent outbreak of 'warranty wars' has seen the years and mileages increase, with Hyundai, for instance, offering a five-year/unlimited mileage deal, while Vauxhall-buyers get a warranty for their lifetime with the car or 100,000 miles.

To quick-fit or not... that is the question

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THERE is always going to be a temptation to go to the local 'quick/fast-fit' centre when replacing motoring consumables.

These specialist chains have boomed as drivers try to save money on exhausts, tyres, batteries, clutches, shock absorbers and routine services, plus the annual MOT.

But main dealers have not been idle, reckoning that if car-owners are still using their service bays, then they won't mind considering realistic deals on tyres and exhausts, for instance, to ensure a time-saving one-stop shop purchase.

Using the main dealer also guarantees only genuine manufacturers' parts are used, bringing the confidence of additional quality and reliability and the knowledge that this will be logged on the dealer/manufacture database.

And that same guarantee, plus realistic pricing, has also encouraged owners to have bodyshop repairs done either by the franchise's own panel-beaters and paintshop or one that gets its seal of approval.

Main dealers have also borrowed from their quick-fit rivals, by offering menu pricing; this means that, like dining out, a customer can decide what he wants and knows in advance what it will cost – avoiding any motoring indigestion when the bill is presented.

Some dealers will even let you spread the cost via finance or servicing schemes covering several years.

Others may also offer a loyalty scheme with a

SORTED: If your new car, like this Hyundai i30, needs a replacement tyre or exhaust, you might find your main dealer can be just as cheap as a fast-fit centre tariff of cheaper prices to keep owners of older and lower-value models on their books rather than see them defect to the non-franchised sector simply because they feel their car is no longer worth paying top servicing prices for.

Another trick borrowed from the quick-fit sector is longer working hours at main-dealer service centres; dealers are much more aware that many customers want to drop off their car early on their way to work and then pick it up at the end of the day – indeed, a courtesy car may even be offered.

Bookings can often be made centrally, too, so that customers living midway between two franchised dealers within the same group can pick the most convenient service slots available

Car care best practice – our top tips

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

DRIVING a modern car is a safer, more forgiving and comfortable experience that it was just a few years ago.

The downside is that much less can be done by the DIY mechanic, so keeping the car reliable, correct and safe is now more of a job for the professional and, of course, it costs.

Unfortunately, this tempts owners to ignore problems and stretch servicing beyond recommended parameters, endangering the warranty and the provenance of the car when you come to sell.

So the golden rules are:

- Maintain the service record by servicing at the correct mileages or annually and ensure the servicing book is properly stamped up, although some motor marques are switching to centralised digital records so a car's servicing history is always available.
- Check the warranty thoroughly for possible pitfalls endangering the guarantee.
- Act on recalls from the manufacturer, even if they do not relate specifically to safety. It will help maintain the warranty and future saleability of the car.
- The MOT is not an assurance of the car's safety and reliability – problems can arise at any time and you should get them checked as soon as possible.
- Check lights regularly for safety and legality. Get used to 'lighting up' in the garage or when you are nosed in or backed up to a wall.

RELIABILITY FROM GOOD CARE: New cars like this innovative Peugeot 3008 crossover are more reliable and safer than ever – but still need looking after

- Check tyres – including the spare – monthly, including correct pressures as listed in the handbook or on the driver's side-door frame. The legal tread depth is 1.6mm, but most motoring authorities advise replacement at 2mm, especially in winter when icy and wet conditions can compromise grip.
- Keep oil, windscreen washer, coolant, power steering, clutch and brake fluid levels topped up without over-filling, and make those checks on level ground. Don't wait for warning lights – it could be too late to prevent damage or compromise safety.

- Replace wiper blades. There's no point in topping up the washer bottle if the blades are worn or split. If the windscreen is covered with bugs and grease, the washer and wipers will struggle – use a spray and some elbow grease.

- Shop around for servicing. Even if you are committed to main-dealer servicing, it does not mean you have to go back to the one where you bought the car – some are better on pricing and customer service than others.
